Polish man arrested over alleged Russian plot to kill Ukraine's Zelenskyy

World . A Polish man has been arrested on allegations of being ready to spy on behalf of Russia's military intelligence in an alleged plot to assassinate Ukraine's President Volodymyr Zelenskyy, Polish prosecutors said Thursday. The office of Poland's National Prosecutor said in a statement that the man, identified only as Pawel K. under Polish privacy laws, was accused of being prepared to pass airport security information to Russian agents and that he was arrested in Poland on Wednesday. The man was seeking contact with Russians directly involved in the war in Ukraine and was expected to pass on detailed information about the Rzeszow-Jasionka airport in south-eastern Poland, near the border with Ukraine, which is the gateway for international military and humanitarian supplies for Ukraine. It also serves leaders and politicians traveling in and out of Ukraine. The airport is under the control of US troops. If convicted, the man could face up to eight years in prison, the statement said.

The prosecutors said the arrest is the result of close cooperation with the prosecutors and security services of Ukraine, who tipped them off and who provided crucial evidence. The case is developing, they said.

In Germany on Thursday, prosecutors said that two German-Russian men have been arrested on suspicion of espionage, one of them accused of agreeing to carry out attacks on potential targets including US military facilities in hopes of sabotaging aid for Ukraine. The two, identified only as Dieter S. and Alexander J. in line with German privacy rules, were arrested Wednesday in the Bavarian city of Bayreuth, Germany's federal prosecutors said. A number of people, including a dual Russian-Spanish citizen have been arrested in Poland on allegations of spying for Russia since Moscow launched its attack on Ukraine in February 2022.

European Union member Poland has been a staunch supporter of neighboring Ukraine and Zelenskyy in fending off Russia's aggression of more than two years.

Two killed in suicide blast attack in Pakistan: Report

World At least two people were killed in a suicide blast attack in Pakistan's Karachi on Friday that struck a vehicle in which foreign nationals were travelling, broadcaster Geo News reported. Five Japanese nationals were in the van when it was attacked in Pakistan's Sindh province. Two terrorists, including the suicide bomber, were killed while all five foreigners in the vehicle survived the attack, the report stated.Police said that the van was targeted by the terrorists who were on a bike. Gunfire sounds were also heard. A bag filled on a bike. Gunfire sounds were also heard. A bag filled with grenades and Kalashnikov was found at the crime scene, they added.All five Japanese remained safe. However, the private security guard with them was injured," Deputy Inspector General (DIG) East Azfar Mahesar was quoted by PTI as saying. "The Japanese nationals were on the way to the Export Processing Zone from their residence in Zamzama, Clifton," he said

'A suicide jacket and a grenade are tied to the terrorist's body," police said, adding that a bomb disposal team reached the attack site.

US vetoes resolution seeking full United Nations membership for Palestine

New York .The United States on Thursday effectively stopped the United Nations from recognizing a Palestinian state by casting a veto in the Security Council to deny Palestinians full membership of the world body.

It vetoed a draft resolution that recommended to the 193-member UN General Assembly that "the State of Palestine be admitted to membership" of the UN. Britain and Switzerland abstained, while the remaining 12 council members voted yes.

The United States continues to strongly support a two-state solution. This vote does not reflect opposition to Palestinian statehood, but instead is an acknowledgment that it will only come from direct negotiations between the parties," Deputy US Ambassador to the UN Robert Wood told the council.Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas condemned the US veto in a statement as "unfair, unethical, and unjustified." alestinian UN Ambassador Riyad Mansour, at times emotional, told the council after the vote: "The fact that this resolution did not pass will not break our will and it will not defeat our determination. We will not stop in our effort."The Palestinian push for full UN membership came six months into a war between Israel and Palestinian militants Hamas in the Gaza Strip, and as Israel is expanding settlements in the occupied West Bank, which the UN considers to be illegal.Israel's Foreign Minister Israel Katz commended the United States for casting a veto.

Addressing the 12 council members who voted in favor of the draft resolution, Israel's UN Ambassador Gilad Erdan said: "It's very sad because your vote will only embolden Palestinian rejectionism even more and make peace almost impossible."The Palestinians are currently a nonmember observer state, a de facto recognition of statehood that was granted by the UN General Assembly in 2012. But an application to become a full UN member needs to be approved by the Security Council and then at least two-thirds of the General Assembly."We believe that such recognition of Palestinian statehood should not come at the start of a new process, but it doesn't have to be at the very end of the process. We must start with fixing the immediate crisis in Gaza, Britain's UN Ambassador Barbara Woodward told

The UN Security Council has long endorsed a vision of two states living side by side within secure and recognized borders. Palestinians want a state in the West Bank, east Jerusalem and Gaza Strip, all territory captured by Israel in 1967. Algeria's UN Ambassador Amar Bendjama argued before the vote that admitting Palestinians to the United Nations would strengthen rather than undermine the two-state solution, adding: "Peace will come from Palestine's inclusion, not from its exclusion."

US committee releases sealed Brazil court orders to suspend X accounts

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil AUS congressional committee released confidential Brazilian court orders to suspend accounts on the social media platform X, offering a glimpse into decisions that have spurred complaints of alleged censorship from the company and its billionaire owner Elon Musk.The Republican-controlled House Judiciary Committee late Wednesday published a Committee late Wednesday published a staff report disclosing dozens of decisions by Brazilian Supreme Court Justice Alexandre de Moraes ordering X to suspend or remove around 150 user profiles from its platform in recent years. To comply with its obligations under US law, X Corp. has responded to the Committee," the company said in a statement on X on April 15. The disclosure comes amid a battle Musk has waged against de Moraes Musk, a selfwaged against de Moraes.Musk, a selfproclaimed free-speech absolutist, had vowed to publish de Moraes' orders, which he equated to censorship. His crusade has been cheered on by supporters of far-right former President Jair Bolsonaro, who allege they are being targeted by political persecution, and have found common cause with their ideological allies in the USDe Moraes has overseen a five-year probe of so-called "digital militias," who allegedly spread defamatory fake news and threats to Supreme Court justices. The investigation expanded to include those inciting demonstrations across the country, seeking to overturn Bolsonaro's 2022, election loss. Those protests 2022 election loss. Those protests culminated in the Jan. 8 uprising in Brazil's capital, with Bolsonaro supporters storming government buildings, including the Supreme Court, in an attempt to oust President Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva from office De Moraes' Lula da Silva from office.De Moraes' critics claim he has abused his powers and shouldn't be allowed to unilaterally ban shouldn't be allowed to unilaterally ban social media accounts, including those of democratically elected legislators. But most legal experts see his brash tactics as legally sound and furthermore justified by extraordinary circumstances of democracy imperiled. They note his decisions have been either upheld by his fellow justices or gone unchallenged. The secret orders disclosed by the congressional committee had been issued congressional committee had been issued both by Brazil's Supreme Court and its top electoral court, over which de Moraes currently presides. The press office of the Supreme Court declined to comment on the potential ramifications of their release when contacted by The Associated Press. Musk is indeed a very innovative businessman; he innovated with electric cars, he innovated with rockets and now he invented a new form of noncompliance of a court order, through an intermediary," said Carlos Affonso, director of the nonprofit Institute of Technology and Society. "He said he would reveal the documents and he found someone to do this for him." Affonso also someone to do this for him." Affonso, also a professor of civil rights at the State University of Rio de Janeiro, said that the orders are legal but do merit debate, given users were not informed why their action was taken by the platform or at the behest of a court. The orders to X included in the report rarely provide justification, either. The Supreme Court's press office said in a statement Thursday afternoon that the orders do not contain justifications, but said the company and people with suspended accounts can gain access by requesting the decisions from the court. While Musk has repeatedly decried de Moraes' orders as suppressing "free speech" principles and amounting to "aggressive censorship," the company under his ownership has bowed to government requests from around the government requests from around the world. Last year, for instance, X blocked posts critical of Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan and, in February, it blocked accounts and posts in India at the behest of the country's government. "The Indian government has issued executive orders requiring X to act on specific accounts and posts, subject to potential penalties including significant fines and imprisonment," X's global affairs account posted on Feb. 21. "In compliance with the orders, we will withhold these accounts and posts in India alone; however, we disagree with these actions and.

US to introduce new sanctions regime to monitor North Korea's nuke programme

Washington DC. The US ambassador to the United Nations said on Friday that she hoped to find a new way to ensure sanctions enforcement on North Korsa by next month. on North Korea by next month after Russia and China thwarted the renewal of monitoring

inda Thomas-Greenfield said Washington and its allies were looking at multiple options both inside and outside the UN to replace a panel of experts that has over the past 15 years monitored the implementation of sanctions aimed at curbing North Korea's nuclear and missile programmes.Russia rejected the annual renewal of the panel last vote.Asked whether the US and its allies could establish an alternative by the time the current panel's mandate expires at the end of April, Thomas-Greenfield told reporters in Tokyo, "That would be the optimal thing to start next month. I don't know that we

We are working to do something in the (UN) General Assembly. We are pushing the (UN) Secretariat through the Secretary-General to do something out of his office, but we are also looking at options outside of the UN," she said, adding that those could be under the auspices of the G7, or with think tanks or research entities.

Thomas-Greenfield said the US and its partners who were pushing for a new monitoring regime may look at having several teams replace the work of the existing panel."There may be not just one option. It may be looking at two or three different options that

Rishi Sunak to plan tougher rules to tackle UK's 'sick leave culture'

World British Prime Minister Rishi Sunak will look at tightening the rules for long-term sick leave in a bid to reverse a rise in the number of Britons who have permanently dropped out of the workforce.

Labour force participation among working-age Britons is its lowest since 2015, due to a rise in long-term illness and a greater number of students, in contrast to other large, rich nations which have seen increased participation since which have seen increased participation since 2020. Sunak, in excerpts of a speech due later on Friday, said the rising number of people not working due to mental health conditions was a particular concern. We need to be more ambitious about helping people back to work and more honest about the risk of overmedicalising the everyday challenges and worries of life," he said.

Some 9.4 million Britons aged 16 to 64 - 22% of that age group - are neither working nor unemployed, up from 8.55 million just before the pandemic, according to official data. Of those, 2.8 million are long-term sick and 206,000 are temporarily ill.Last year Britain's budget watchdog said a quarter of people who were off work due to long-term sickness were waiting for medical treatment, although it added that cutting waiting lists to their 2015 length might only get 25,000 back into work. Over half of the long-term sick reported suffering from 'depression, bad nerves or anxiety', although many said it was a secondary condition alongside their main health problem.

Sunak's office said medics were too willing to issue repeat notes approving extended sick leave, rather than advising how a person could get back to work, paving the way for people to move on to long-term sickness benefits. Sunak change the sick note culture, so the default becomes what work you can do - not what you accusing him of inciting the US Capitol attack, while the former president fights his 2020 election interference criminal case in Washington.

Trump loses bid to halt US Capital riot civil lawsuits amid criminal charges

US District Judge Amit Mehta in Washington denied defense lawyers' request to put the civil cases seeking to hold Trump responsible for the Jan. 6, 2021, riot on hold while the criminal case accusing him of conspiring to overturn his election defeat to President Joe Biden plays out.It's the latest legal setback for the presumptive Republican presidential nominee, whose trial in a separate criminal case related to hush money payments made during the 2016 campaign began this week with jury selection in New York. The lawsuits brought by Democratic lawmakers and police officers who defended the Capitol on Jan. 6 seek civil damages for harm they say they suffered during the attack, which aimed to stop Congress' certification of Biden's victory.Trump has claimed he can't be sued over the riot that left Washington's federal appeals court ruled in December that the lawsuits can move forward, rejecting Trump's sweeping claims that presidential immunity shields him from liability. The court, however, said Trump can continue to fight, as the cases proceed, to try to prove that his actions were taken in his official capacity as president.In court papers filed last month, Trump's lawyers told the judge that "basic fairness to

And the judge said "appropriate safeguards" can be put in place to allow for the lawsuits to advance without infringing on Trump's Fifth Amendment right to avoid self-incrimination. The Supreme Court is set to hear arguments next week on Trump's claim that he is immune from criminal prosecution in the election interference case brought by special counsel Jack Smith. Iran vs Israel: A look at their air forces as conflict escalates

Jerusalem. Iran's first direct attack on Israel on April 13 has brought renewed focus on their air-defence capabilities as Israeli leaders decide how best to respond. Below is a look at both countries' air forces and aerial defence systems:The Iranian air force has 37,000 personnel, but decades of international sanctions have largely cut the country off from the latest high-tech military equipment, according to the International Institute for Strategic Studies in London (IISS). The air force only has a few dozen working strike aircraft, including Russian jets and ageing US models acquired before the Iranian revolution of 1979.

Tehran has a squadron of nine F-4 and F-5 fighter jets, one squadron of Russian-made Sukhoi-24 jets, and some MiG-29s, F7 and F14 aircraft, IISS said.

The Iranians also have pilotless planes designed to fly into targets and explode Analysts believe this drone arsenal numbers in the low thousands. In addition, they say, Iran has more than 3,500 surface-to-surface missiles, some of which carry half-tonne warheads The number capable of reaching Israel may be lower, however.Iran's Air force Commander, Amir Vahedi, on Wednesday said the Sukhoi-24s, were in their "best state of preparedness" to counter any potential Israeli attack.But Iran's dependence on Sukhoi-24s jets, first developed in the 1960s, shows the relative weakness of its air force. For defence, Iran relies on a mixture of Russian and domestically produced surface-to-air missiles and air defence systems. Tehran received deliveries of the S-300 anti-aircraft system from Russia in 2016, which are long-range surface-to-air missile systems capable of engaging multiple targets simultaneously, including aircraft and ballistic missiles.Iran also has the domestically produced Bavar-373 surface-to-air missile platform, as well as the Sayyad and Raad defence systems. Fabian Hinz, a research fellow at IISS, said: "If there was a major conflict between the two countries, Iran would probably concentrate on occasional successes. They don't have the comprehensive air defences that Israel has."ISRAELIsrael has an advanced, US-supplied air force with hundreds of F-15, F-16 and F-35 multipurpose jet fighters. These played a role in shooting down Iranian drones at the weekend. The air force lacks longrange bombers, though a smaller fleet of repurposed Boeing 707s serve as refuelling tankers that could enable its fighters to reach Iran for pinpoint sorties. A pioneer in drone technology, Israel has Heron pilotless planes capable of flying for more than 30 hours, enough for far-flung operations. Its Delilah loitering munition has an estimated range of 250 km (155 miles) - far short of the Gulf, though the air force could close the gap by delivering one of the munitions closer to Iran's border. Israel is widely believed to have developed longrange surface-to-surface missiles, but neither confirms nor denies this. In 2018, then-Defence Minister Avigdor Lieberman announced that the Israeli military would get a new "missile force". The military has not said where those plans now stand.A multi-layer aerial defence system developed with US help after the 1991 Gulf War provides Israel with several additional options for shooting down long-range Iranian drones and missiles. The highest-altitude system is Arrow-3, which intercepts ballistic missiles in space. An earlier model, Arrow-2, works at lower altitudes. The mid-range David's Sling counters ballistic missiles and cruise missiles, while the shortrange Iron Dome tackles the kind of rockets and mortars used by Iranianbacked militias in Gaza and Lebanon but can also, in theory, be fired at any more powerful missiles missed by Arrow or David's Sling.The Israeli systems are designed to be patched into counterpart US interceptors in the region for coalition-strength defences."Israel's air defences performed well over the course of the (April 13) attack," said Sidharth Kausha, a research fellow at the Royal United Strategic Institute in London. He noted that some of the incoming targets, particularly drones, were shot down by allied aircraft before they reached Israel, "which limited its degree of exposure to some threat types, and there appears to have been sufficient early warning to enable preparation of a coalition response which means the system was better prepared than it might have been if exposed.

Zero voters turnout in six Nagaland districts

RNS: The six out of the 16 administrative districts in Nagaland recorded "zero percent" voting during the elections, while the remaining districts saw regular voter turnout.

The Eastern Nagaland People's Organisation (ENPO), which has been advocating for the amalgamation of six underdeveloped districts into a single state since 2010, declared a "public emergency" and urged voters to stay at home. Consequently, only a few votes were cast in these districts. The Chief Electoral Officer of the northeastern state has informed ENPO about alleged attempts to interfere with the election process. It is claimed that certain groups tried to restrict voters' movement in the eastern Nagaland areas to influence the general election. Therefore, ENPO

The organization further stated that their initiative was voluntary and community-driven, and thus, section 171C does not apply, as there was no crime of undue influence during the elections. They acknowledged that there may have been some miscommunication and expressed their willingness to cooperate with the Election Commission to resolve any issues.

RNS I Kolkata: The World Health Organization (WHO) has expressed deep concern over the global spread of avian influenza, commonly known as "bird flu," to mammals, including humans. Dr. Jeremy Farrar, Chief Scientist at WHO, highlighted the significant public health threat posed by the H5N1 avian influenza virus, which has shown an extremely high mortality rate among the several hundred people known to have been infected with it. While no human-to-human transmission of H5N1 has been recorded to date, Dr. Farrar emphasized the virus's ability to evolve and potentially develop the ability for human-to-human transmission. He noted that the virus initially started in poultry and ducks but has now spread to mammals, including dairy cows in the United States.

The ongoing outbreak of H5N1 among dairy cows in the United States is of particular concern, with Dr. Farrar urging close monitoring and investigation by public health authorities. He highlighted the need to understand the mechanisms of transmission,

created by milking structures or environmental factors.

To address these challenges, WHO has announced updated language to describe airborne pathogens, aiming to enhance international cooperation in combating new global pandemics. The initiative, initiated in response to the COVID-19 pandemic, seeks to standardize terms used by medics and scientists to describe transmission routes, such as replacing "aerosols" and "droplets" with "infectious respiratory particles" (IRPs) to avoid confusion about particle sizes.

Gaya LS Constituency Records Peaceful Polling

by Suresh Pd Nikhar

Gaya: Voting in the Gaya Lok Sabha constituency remained peaceful, with a turnout of 52% recorded so far. The day started with polling booths facing issues such as poor drinking water arrangements at locations like Railway Mixed Primary School near the railway station and Marshalling Yard.

However, improvements were made later, ensuring a smoother voting process. District Magistrate and District Election Officer Dr. Tayagarajan SM monitored the urban area booths in Gaya, where voting proceeded without major incidents apart from some EVM malfunctions and voter protests in Bodh Gaya. Despite these challenges, voting commenced promptly at 7 am, with long queues forming at most polling booths. Pandals were set up near booths to provide shelter from the sun, which was appreciated by voters.

Election staffs were provided with drinking water, and in some cases, cold drinks were supplied to cope with the heat. Local activist Gudu Yadav even provided drinking water in traditional containers at one booth.

To facilitate voter turnout, arrangements were made for voters to be dropped off and picked up at the gates of polling stations, and in some cases, private vehicles went up to the booth entrances to assist senior citizens and disabled persons. Efforts were made to rectify EVM malfunctions promptly, although some polling officials faced difficulties in addressing issues related to missing names in the electoral rolls, especially in urban areas.

Gua: The Human Resource Development Centre (HRDC) and JGOM Safety Department organized a "Couples Safety Training" program at the Officers' Club, Kiriburu. "Had Mangoes Only Thrice, Sweets 6 Times In Jail": Arvind Kejriwal's Lawyer

New Delhi: Did Delhi Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal - in Tihar Jail on corruption charges linked to the alleged liquor policy scam - eat mangoes while behind bars? Did his tea have sugar or a non-calorific sweetener? And how many times did he eat aloo-puri? These are the questions at the heart of the latest row between the Aam Aadmi Party leader - a Type 2 diabetes patient - and the Enforcement Directorate, which had opposed his request for daily 15-minute video consults with his doctor. The AAP has claimed a "conspiracy to kill" the Delhi Chief Minister, who reportedly requires insulin twice a day. On Thursday evening Mr Kejriwal's party colleague, Atishi, alleged the AAP leader had not been given the required dose - life-saving for a patient with severe diabetes - "despite repeated requests".

Earlier, in a detailed statement submitted to the court, Mr Kejriwal countered each of the ED's arguments against allowing him a video consultation with his doctor. The ED had argued the Chief Minister regularly ate mangoes and sweets, and drunk tea with copious amounts

Mr Kejriwal's Insulin Schedule

Noting the "applicant" has been a diabetes patient for 22 years, the document states he had been receiving injections of insulin twice a day for the past 12 years. These doses are 28 units of Novarapid (before meals) and 22 units of Lanctus (at night), for a total of 50 units, the document said. The statement claimed Mr Kejriwal had been advised to discontinue insulin injections from February 1 "under careful medical supervision". Mr Kejriwal said he was then told to follow a "daily medical and dietary" schedule that includes regular exercise. However, after his arrest (on March 21), the Chief Minister said he had been "incapacitated and unable to follow (the new schedule)". He was, therefore, returned to his course of injections. "However, to this date since his arrest, applicant has not been administered insulin to control his sugar levels," the AAP leader's lawyer told the court.

New Delhi: Amidst the voting in the 1st phase of Lok Sabha elections in Madhya Pradesh's Chhindwara, the city mayor's Vikram Ahake, who recently switched to BJP from Congress, urged the people to vote in favour of the Congress. Taking u-turn, Ahake posted a video on social media urging people to vote for the Congress candidate Nakul Nath, son of former Chief Minister Kamal Nath. The BJP has fielded Vivek Bunty Sahu and several top party leaders have visited the constituency to campaign for him. Chhindwara is one of the six Lok Sabha seats where the first phase of the parliamentary elections is currently taking place.

"Soon after joining a political party, I was feeling suffocated. I felt that I was not doing the right thing with a person who has developed Chhindwara," Ahake said in the video. Nath always devoted himself to the constituency's betterment, be it the education sector, providing treatment to people or carrying out development works, said Ahake.

'In the future, I will get a lot of opportunities to do politics. I don't know what will happen to me, but if I

Iran-Israel war keeps world in suspense

IRAN reportedly fired about 350 missiles and drones at Israel on April 13 in response to Israel's attack on its consulate in Damascus on April 1, which had resulted in the killing of seven senior military officials, including Gen Mohammad Reza Zahedi, who was handling Iran's relations with the Hezbollah in Lebanon. About 115-130 missiles targeting Israel were intercepted by the Israeli and allied air defences; others failed in flight and did not reach their target. Iran had alerted the Americans through Swiss, Iraqi, Turkish and Jordanian sources 72 hours in advance about the attack, though without specifying the exact time. Thus, there was no damage, except serious injuries to a seven-year-old Israeli girl. The attack was largely symbolic; the Iranians wanted to tell Israel that they had the capability to hurt it. Tel Aviv's reaction was full of indignation, with the Israeli war cabinet favouring retaliation, though it was divided over the timing and scale of the response. US President Joe Biden told PM Benjamin Netanyahu that Israel had won by thwarting the missiles and that the US would not take part in any counter-offensive against Iran. Two senior Israeli ministers said Tel Aviv would not act alone and build a regional coalition against Iran. The Israeli attack indicated a change of strategy as it had in the past targeted the Iranian associates or proxies mostly in countries involved in supplying weapons or other support to the 'resistance' groups (except nuclear scientists in Iran). Tehran's support for the Hamas in its audacious attack on Israel in October last year, continuous missile attacks by the Hezbollah in recent days and Houthi attacks on Israeli and American ships in the Red Sea indicated that Iran was feeling emboldened.By attacking the Iranian consulate in Damascus — a protected facility under the international conventions — Israel sent a clear message to Iran that its aggressive actions would not go unpunished and that Tel Aviv would go to any extent to strike directly at Tehran. The latter had also avoided attacking Israel, fearful of America's 'ironclad' support for Tel Aviv and the adverse impact of a large-scale conflict on its economy, which is reeling under high inflation, low economic growth, shortage of various commodities due to sanctions and domestic discontent. Iran was obliged to take this symbolic action to retain its credibility among its people, foreign proxies and other countries supporting it.

The Arab states were divided in their reaction to the Iranian attack. Saudi Arabia and the UAE reportedly passed on intelligence to the US on Iran's plans to attack Israel, and it helped thwart the massive assault. Jordan actively participated in shooting drones heading to Israel. Several Arab countries allowed the use of their airspace to intercept the Iranian missiles and drones, and some even supplied their forces for assistance. Egypt called for restraint on both sides.

As the Iranian attack became imminent, the US ordered the deployment of aircraft and missile defence systems in the region and coordinated actions between Israel and Arab governments. As per reports, the US operations centre in Qatar tracked the missiles and drones launched by Iran through its radars in the Gulf countries. This information was sent to fighter jets, ships and missile defence systems operating in the region. As soon as the drones and missiles came within range, they were shot down mostly by American and Israeli fighters and some by British, French and Jordanian warplanes.Besides President Biden, leaders from the UK, Germany, France and other countries have appealed to Israel not to retaliate following the attack. India has asked both countries to go for immediate de-escalation, exercise restraint, step back from violence and return to the path of diplomacy. China expressed 'deep concern' and called on "influential countries (read the US) to play a constructive role in maintaining regional peace and stability". Russia said "all disagreements be resolved exclusively by political and diplomatic methods.

With DMK-led alliance leading, real battle for 2nd spot in TN

The best social security model, and not the one packed with freebies, should get preference in the selection of representatives.

WITH Tamil Nadu set to vote on April 19 in the first phase of the Lok Sabha elections, candidates and campaigners of political parties are braving the heat to win over voters. Elections in the state are often likened to a carnival, but this time, they have sparked a curious buzz. Alongside the usual contenders, the BJP is positioning itself as a formidable force. The party's state chief, K Annamalai, who is contesting from the Coimbatore constituency, is hopeful that the party will secure more than 20 per cent of the votes. Even as opinion polls predict an easy victory for the DMK-led ruling alliance, the real contest appears to be about securing the second place. However, even this perception could be a narrative crafted by the BJP. The AIADMK-led alliance and Tamil nationalist party Naam Thamizhar are also in the fray, making it a four-cornered contest. The DMK has retained its alliance with the Left, the Congress, Viduthalai Chiruthaigal Katchi, MDMK, and several smaller parties, while the AIADMK and the BJP parted ways in September last year. This rupture occurred after Annamalai allegedly made disparaging remarks about DMK founder CN Annadurai and AIADMK's former Chief Minister J Jayalalithaa. When MG Ramachandran (MGR) chose to leave the DMK and establish his own party, he decided to name it after his mentor, Anna. Thus, Anna Dravida Munnetra Kazhagam was born. The name was later changed to the AIADMK — All India (Anaithu Indhiya) Anna Dravida Munnetra Kazhagam. Given this legacy, the party could not afford to be indifferent to remarks that disparaged Anna. In response, the AIADMK demanded Annamalai's replacement for the alliance to continue. However, with the BJP high command refusing to yield, the AIADMK ultimately walked out. Following the split, both AIADMK and BJP made concerted efforts to build strong alliances. The AIADMK has aligned with DMDK (Desiya Murpokku Dravida Kazhagam), Puthiya Thamizhagam and SDPI (Social Democratic Party of India). On the other hand, the BJP has formed an alliance with Pattali Makkal Katchi, Tamil Maanila Congress, Amma Makkal Munnetra Kazhagam (a splinter group of the AIADMK, formed by TTV Dhinakaran, nephew of VK Sasikala, who was a close associate of Jayalalithaa), and a few other parties. O Panneerselvam, another AIADMK dissident leader, will be contesting as an independent candidate backed by the BJP-led front.

Since the formation of these alliances, both fronts have been aggressively targeting each other, in addition to taking on the DMK-led front. Annamalai has claimed that the AIADMK will cease to exist after June 4 and that the party's cadres will rally around Dhinakaran. In response, AIADMK leaders have issued sharp statements, with former Chief Minister and AIADMK general secretary Edappadi Palaniswami even advising Annamalai to mind his language.

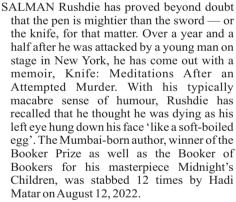

While at the national level, this election is about the BJP's bid to retain power, the focus in Tamil Nadu is on the tussle between the AIADMK and the BJP. "The perception that there is a fight for the second place between the AIADMK and the BJP is primarily due to the splintering within the former," says AS Panneerselvan, the author of Karunanidhi: A Life. He explains: "There were two crucial transition points in the DMK. One was in 1969 after Annadurai's death, when there was uncertainty about whether Nedunchezhiyan or Karunanidhi would lead the party. This was resolved within 15 days. The second was after Karunanidhi's death, which again saw a smooth transition. In contrast, the AIADMK has had two painful transition points. One was after MGR's death; it took almost two years to resolve the succession issue.

The other was after Jayalalithaa's death, and it's unclear what the consolidation will be like. In the aftermath of Jayalalithaa's death, Palaniswami, who successfully took control of the party, expelled three prominent leaders — Sasikala, Dhinakaran and Panneerselvam — from the AIADMK. The trio hails from the powerful Thevar community. Under Palaniswami's leadership, there appears to have been a consolidation of support from the Gounder community, to which he belongs."There are doubts about Palaniswami's leadership. No one knows how this is going to play out," says Panneerselvan. "If there is a perception of a fight for the second place, it's because of the AIADMK's internal contradictions and infighting. The challenge for the AIADMK could possibly be how it is going to reinvent itself," he adds.Durai Karuna, a senior journalist who has extensively covered AIADMK affairs, acknowledges that the party may undergo consolidation in the event of an electoral setback, but he does not believe that the AIADMK will cease to exist, as Annamalai claims. According to him, the AIADMK's organisational setup and cadre base — which the BJP cannot match — will stand it in good stead. The BJP is indeed pulling out all the stops to step up its narrative and presence in Tamil Nadu. For now, the party is aiming to turn perception into reality, converting the buzz about it into votes through a variety of strategies. These include fielding prominent figures in the elections and having Prime Minister Narendra Modi campaign in the state over half a dozen times, besides other national leaders. Whether these strategies will be successful remains to be seen, and the answer will be revealed on June 4.

Resilient Rushdie

Embattled author roots for freedom of speech

The attack didn't really come as a surprise to Rushdie. The threat of assassination had been hanging over his head like the sword of Damocles since the late 1980s, when Iran's then Supreme Leader Ayatollah Khomeini issued a fatwa against him over his controversial novel

The Satanic Verses. He was forced to remain in hiding for several years, even as Hitoshi Igarashi, who translated the book into Japanese, was stabbed to death in July 1991. Earlier that year, the novel's Italian translator, Ettore Capriolo, survived a stabbing at his home in Milan, while William Nygaard, the book's Norwegian publisher, narrowly escaped with his life after being shot at in Oslo in October 1993.

commendably, the writer continues to be a zealous votary of free speech despite his traumatic, near-death experience. 'The whole point of freedom of speech is that you have to permit speech you don't agree with,' he said before the release of his new book. His resilience and defiance show that he won't be cowed by the threats and attacks of bigots and hate-mongers. Rushdie is in no rush to die — physically, morally or intellectually.

Xi keen on bolstering armed forces for warfare

Security remains Beijing's top concern. It was mentioned 28 times in the Govt Work Report, three times more than in last year's report.

NEARLY 6,000 members of the Chinese Communist Party (CCP) and the government's top echelons congregated in Beijing recently to attend the week-long plenary meetings of the National People's Congress (NPC) — China's version of a parliament — and its top political advisory body, the Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference (CPPCC). This NPC session (March 4-11) signalled that President Xi Jinping had further consolidated his authority as China's preeminent leader and more firmly stamped the CCP's imprimatur on the state. Equally importantly, it reaffirmed China's global leadership ambitions. However, the economic difficulties were glossed over.

The 40-page Government Work Report, read out by Premier Li Qiang on the opening day, included laudatory references to President Xi — mandatory since the 18th Party Congress in 2012. This year, however, Premier Li singled him out for special praise. Li asserted: "We owe our achievements in 2023 to General Secretary Xi Jinping, who is at the helm charting the course."Security remains Beijing's top concern and was mentioned 28 times in the report, three times more than in last year's report. Asserting the importance of "promoting stability through progress" while addressing leaders of central and provincial governments, Li stressed that "stability is of overall importance, as it is the basis for everything we do. All localities and government departments should adopt more policies that are conducive to keeping expectations, economic growth and employment stable". This emphasis on stability and security was also noticeable in the report of the Supreme People's Court, presented on March 8. It claimed an increase of 29.5 per cent in the number of completed cases. Interestingly, it referred to "0.04 per cent of the other cases" meaning those "harming national security, harming defence interests..." In other words, the Supreme People's Court tried 70,520 national security and defence-related cases in 2023, but just under 1 in 20,000 Chinese were charged with subversion!

The national defence budget was increased by 7.2 per cent or 1.67 trillion yuan ($231.4 billion), making 2024 the ninth straight year to see a single-digit hike in the country's defence budget. This budget has doubled since 2013, when Xi took over. This increase, in spite of a slowing GDP growth rate, confirms China's efforts to build a modern, technologically advanced, world-class army and its ambition to 'recover' its 'lost' territories. Noticeable is the fresh thrust towards advanced technology and emphasis on building the navy. Speaking to PLA representatives at the NPC and CPPCC plenary sessions on March 7, Xi "emphasised that the strategic capabilities in emerging fields are crucial components of the national strategic system and capabilities, which are related to the high-quality development of China's economy and society, national security, and the initiative of military struggle". He stressed the need to "promote the efficient integration and two-way stimulation of new productive forces and new combat forces".Xi stressed the importance of enhancing the strategic capabilities in emerging fields and said it was important to "integrate preparation for maritime military warfare, safeguarding maritime rights and development of the maritime economy". On the sidelines of the NPC session, Yuan Huazhi, Political Commissar of the PLA Navy and NPC Deputy, told the Hong Kong Commercial Daily (March 5) that China would unveil its fourth aircraft carrier soon. He said there were no obstacles in developing China's aircraft carrier technologies. The appointment of Gen Dong Jun, a PLA Navy officer and submariner, as Defence Minister will ensure adequate funds for the

Xi also mentioned building a network space defence system and enhancing the ability to safeguard national network security. Alluding to the civil-military fusion, he called for strengthening the coordinated implementation of major projects in science and technology, promoting independent and original innovation, and fostering a vibrant ecosystem for innovation. Zhang Yuzhuo, Chairman of the state-owned Assets Supervision and Administration Commission of the State Council, disclosed that investment by central state-owned enterprises (SOEs) in strategic emerging industries increased by 32.1 per cent in 2023 and that this would grow. He said there would be a focus "especially on brain-like intelligence, quantum information and controlled nuclear fusion".

As anticipated, the Government Work Report sought to paper over China's economic problems. However, by projecting a GDP growth rate of 5 per cent — the same as the previous year — and estimating the inflation rate also at last year's 3 per cent, it revealed the country's economic difficulties. The unchanged 5 per cent growth rate indicated the government's reluctance to set a figure it cannot reach, or a realistically low figure which would further undermine confidence. Unlike last year, when Beijing's abrupt exit from the 'zero Covid' policy saw a sudden burst in economic activities in the first half, this time, China has no such advantage. Further, though the government sees inflation at around 3 per cent, China's National Statistics Bureau reports that the economy is slipping into deflation. The CCP's failure to hold the Third Plenum, which stipulates the country's economic goals, on schedule in October or November suggests differences within the party.

The NPC plenary session strengthened and reconfirmed Xi and the CCP's pre-eminent position. It indicated that manufacturing remains important and there will be emphasis on preserving China's position in the global supply chain. No stimulus measures were announced, however, for China's economy. China's private entrepreneurs would have been disappointed at the absence of incentives and the pronouncedly favoured status accorded by the Politburo to the SOEs. What was important was Xi's attention to strengthening the armed forces for multi-dimensional warfare (land, air, cyber, space and sea) by using advanced technology and enhancing the PLA Navy's capabilities.

After Europa League exit, Liverpool ready for last push in Premier League title race

New Delhi. Liverpool boss Jurgen Klopp admitted that their Europa League exit was not ideal, but looked ahead and said that the Reds will turn their focus completely on the Premier League title race. Liverpool beat Atalanta 1-0 away from home on Thursday, but it was still not enough for them to progress to the semi-final as they lost 3-1 on aggregate after a flop show at Anfield last week.Liverpool managed to secure a 1-0 victory on the night, courtesy of a penalty expertly converted by Mohamed Salah, in Bergamo. The Italian side managed to defend their lead valiantly at home, ensuring their passage to the semi-finals of the competition and march toward their firstever European final.

We gave ourselves a massive hurdle (in the first leg), but I liked the game a lot for a long time, the commitment, the desire, the power the boys showed was incredible. It is mixed emotions. We would have wished that we could have gone to Dublin (for the final), but that hasn't happened," Klopp said. We now have one competition left (Premier League) and we will throw ourselves into that completely.'

Klopp's hopes of winning a European title in his last season as the manager of Liverpool went up in smoke despite a resilient show. However, Liverpool are in the Premier League race. Liverpool are currently at 3rd and tied on points with second-placed Arsenal, 2 behinds behind leaders Manchester City, who were also knocked out of the Champions League quarter-final by Real Madrid.

LAST PUSH IN PREMIER LEAGUE

Following a surprising defeat to Crystal Palace, Klopp highlighted the need for conviction and a more cohesive pressing game, traits that Liverpool must embody if they are to sustain their title challenge. With the Premier League race shaping up to be one of the most exhilarating in recent memory, Liverpool's resolve and ability to bounce back from setbacks will be tested.

Liverpool face a quick turnaround as they take on Fulham away from home on April 21. Captain Virgil van Dijk said on Thursday that Liverpool have pick themselves up quickly and go all out in the remainder of the league season."We won tonight and we kept a clean sheet, so there are so many more positives that we can take.

Impact sub halting progress of half allrounders: Zaheer Khan backs Rohit Sharma's claim

New Delhi. After Rohit Sharma, former India cricketer Zaheer Khan also expressed concerns about the Impact Player Rule, highlighting its potential to hinder the development of all-rounders. Rohit's critique has sparked discussions about its implications for team composition and player development. Zaheer raised concerns about the Impact Player Rule, emphasizing the need for stakeholders to address the issue. He expressed worry that the rule might lead to teams having only partial allrounders rather than complete ones."I completely agree it's debatable, little concern for sure. But we need to find a way on how to deal with it. In Impact Player rule you will find half all-rounders but not a complete one," Zaheer said.

The timing of the debate coincides with the impending selection of India's squad for the T20 World Cup. Amid much anticipation, the spotlight has fallen on Shivam Dube's potential inclusion as an all-rounder. While he has excelled with the bat, boasting an impressive tournament average of over 60 and scoring 242 runs in 6 matches, his prowess with the ball remains unproven. Despite being a spin-bowling all-rounder, he hasn't bowled in either the IPL 2024 or domestic cricket thus far, raising questions about his credentials in that aspect. WHAT'S ROHIT'S TAKE ON IMPACT

Rohit, while speaking on the Club Prairie Fire podcast, showed his concerns over the likes of Washington Sunder and Dube. He reckoned that cricket is an 11-player game and not 12, calling himself not a big fan of the rule."It is not good for the all-rounders. Washington Sundar and Shivam Dube haven't bowled this season. This is a concerning aspect. You play international cricket with 11 players, but you are competing with 12 players in the IPL.

Berlin Julian Nagelsmann has solidified his position as the head coach of the Germany national team by signing a contract extension that will see him at the helm until the conclusion of the 2026 World Cup. This decision comes after Nagelsmann took over from Hansi Flick in September 2023, initially on a short-term deal that was set to expire after the European Championships in the summer of 2024.

Nagelsmann, at 36 years old, has already made a notable impact in his tenure as head coach, securing victories in three out of six matches, including significant wins against France and the Netherlands in March. His leadership has not only brought about success on the field but has also ignited a sense of excitement and anticipation among fans and players alike about what lies ahead.Expressing his commitment and passion for the role, Nagelsmann stated. This is a decision of the heart. It is a great honor to be able to train the national team and work with the best players in the country." He emphasized the opportunity to inspire an entire nation through successful and passionate performances, highlighting the emotional victories against France and the Netherlands as particularly moving experiences. Looking forward, Nagelsmann expressed eagerness to lead the team in a successful home European Championship and to face the challenges of the World Cup with his coaching team. The decision to extend Nagelsmann's contract was met with unanimous approval at a Supervisory Board and Shareholders' Meeting of the German Football Association (DFB), reflecting the confidence and trust placed in him to steer the national team towards future

Before taking the reins of the national team, Nagelsmann had an impressive coaching career, including a two-year tenure at RB Leipzig, where he led the team to the Champions League semi-finals for the first time in club history, and a three-year stint at Hoffenheim. Babar must ensure selection on merit: Explayers question Imad Wasim's omission

Rawalpind. Imad Wasim's omission has been questioned by former players after the all-rounder was left out of the Pakistan team for the first T20I against New Zealand, having come out of retirement to play international cricket again. Wasim and left-arm seamer Mohammad Amir came out of retirement ahead of the T20 World Cup in June this year after much convincing, but the spin-bowling all-rounder did not find a place in the eleven on Thursday.Only two balls were bowled as incessant rains washed out the first T20I in Rawalpindi, with Pakistan handing debuts to UAE-based off-spinner Usman Khan, middle-order batter and seamer Irfan Khan and mystery spinner Abrar Ahmed. Former Test player Iqbal Qasim said, "(It) makes no sense to me, honestly, Imad should have played in place of Shadab Khan." Mohsin Khan, former player, head coach and chief selector said players such as Imad and Amir must play all games to 'overcome rustiness'. "So much hue and cry over bringing back Imad and Amir, and they must get maximum matches to overcome their rustiness in international cricket," he said

It is known that skipper Babar Azam and Imad do not share a cordial relationship. Babar is said to have left the Karachi Kings franchise in the Pakistan Super League because of Imad, who later went on to play for Islamabad United. Former captain and team director Mohammad Hafeez had claimed that Imad had taken his international retirement after he felt hard done by the team management, including Babar. Would have made more cricket sense to have Imad who is a left arm spinner and bring more power to the lower batting order compared to Shadab," another former player said. However, cricket writer and analyst Omar Alavi believes Babar must take right decisions in his second stint. "Babar has got a second chance to create his own legacy as Pakistan captain but to do that he has to ensure selection on merit and situational requirement," Alavi said. Meanwhile, Pakistan will look to maximise their preparations for the T20 World Cup with series against New Zealand (ongoing), Ireland and England lined up.
