Papua New Guinea PM reacts to Biden's 'uncle eaten by cannibals'

Sydeney. Papua New Guinea Prime Minister James Marape says his nation does not deserve to be labelled cannibals, and urged the US to clear up the remnants of World War Two littered across the Pacific, after comments by President Joe Biden about his missing serviceman uncle.den had "appeared to imply his uncle was eaten by cannibals after his plane was shot down over PNG during WWII", Marape's office said in a statement late on Sunday. President Biden's remarks may have been a slip of the tongue; however, my country does not deserve to be labelled as such," Marape said in the statement.

urge President Biden to get the White House to look into cleaning up these remains of WWII so the truth about missing servicemen like Ambrose Finnegan can be put to rest."The US signed a defence cooperation agreement with Papua New Guinea last year, amid competition for influence in the region with China, which has a security pact with the neighbouring Solomon Islands. China's Foreign Minister Wang Yi met with Marape in the capital Port Moresby on Sunday to build closer economic ties, while Australia's Prime Minister Anthony Albanese arrives this week to commemorate World War Two history. Biden has previously cited his personal connection with Papua New Guinea's wartime history on visits to Australia, telling the story of his uncle who died in a plane crash in May 1944.Biden last week raised the possibility his uncle might have fallen victim to cannibals, after visiting a missing-in-action war memorial in Pennsylvania. Historians say Papua New Guinea was crucial to the United States' drive across the Pacific to liberate the Philippines in World War Two, while Australia has said the wartime history showed the renewed strategic importance of its northern neighbour.

The impact of the war remains sensitive among Pacific Islanders, however.Marape said his nation was "needlessly dragged into a conflict that was not their doing".Papua New Guinea and Solomon Islands remain littered with wartime human remains, plane wrecks, ship wrecks and tunnels, as well as leftover bombs which were still killing people, he said.

Terry Anderson, US journalist held hostage for 7 years in Lebanon, dies at 76

New York. Terry Anderson, a US journalist who was held captive by Islamist militants for almost seven years in Lebanon and came to symbolise the plight of Western hostages during the country's 1975-1990 civil war, died on Sunday at age 76, his daughter said in a statement. The former chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, who was the longest held hostage of the scores of Westerners abducted in Lebanon, died at his home in Greenwood Lake, New York, said his daughter Sulome Anderson, who was born three months after he was seized. No cause of death was givenept in barely-lit cells by mostly Shi'ite Muslim groups in what was known as The Hostage Crisis, and chained by his hands and feet and blindfolded much of the time, the former Marine later recalled that he "almost went insane" and that only his Roman Catholic faith prevented him from taking his life before he was freed in December 1991.

'Though my father's life was marked by extreme suffering during his time as a hostage in captivity, he found a quiet, comfortable peace in recent years. I know he would choose to be remembered not by his very worst experience, but through his humanitarian work with the Vietnam Children's Fund, the Committee to Protect Journalists, homeless veterans and many other incredible causes," Sulome Anderson said. The family will take some time to organise a memorial, she said.

Anderson's ordeal began in Beirut on the morning of March 16, 1985, after he played a round of tennis. A green Mercedes sedan with curtains over the rear window pulled up, three gunmen jumped out and dragged Anderson, still dressed in shorts, into the car.

The pro-Iran Islamic Jihad group claimed responsibility for the kidnapping, saying it was part of "continuing operations against Americans." The abductors demanded freedom for Shi'ite Muslims jailed in Kuwait for bomb attacks against the US and French embassies there.It was the start of a nightmare for Anderson that would last six years and nine months during which he was stuck in cells under the rubble-strewn streets of Beirut and elsewhere, often badly fed and seeping on a thin, dirty mattress on a concrete floor. During captivity, both his father and brother would die of cancer and he would not see his daughter Sulome until she was six

Global military spending reaches all-time high, India in top 5 spenders

Stockholm. Global military expenditure saw its steepest increase in over a decade in 2023, reaching an all-time high of $2.4 trillion as wars and rising tensions fuelled spending across the world, researchers said Monday.Military spending rose across the globe with particularly large increases in Europe, the Middle East and Asia, according to a new report by the according to a new report by the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute (SIPRI)."Total military spending is at an all-time high ... and for the first time since 2009, we saw spending increase across all five geographical regions," Nan Tian, a senior researcher at SIPRI, told AFP."It's a reflection of the deterioration of peace and security around the world. There's really not a region in the world where things have

Tian noted that while Moscow's and Kyiv's overall budgets were relatively close in 2023, Ukraine's military spending equalled 37 per cent of its gross domestic product (GDP) and 58 per cent of all government

Baby in Gaza delivered after mother killed in Israeli strike

Rafah. A baby girl was delivered from the womb of a Palestinian killed along with her husband and daughter by an Israeli attack in the Gaza city of Rafah, where 19 people died overnight in intensified strikes, Palestinian health officials

The dead, killed in hits on two houses, included 13 children from one family, they said. The baby, weighing 1.4 kg and delivered in an emergency Csection, was stable and improving gradually, said Mohammed Salama, a doctor caring for her.

Her mother, Sabreen Al-Sakani, had been 30 weeks pregnant. The baby was placed in an incubator in a Rafah hospital alongside another infant, with the words "The baby of the martyr Sabreen Al-Sakani" written on tape across her chest.Sakani's young daughter Malak, who was killed in the strike, had wanted to name her new sister Rouh, meaning spirit in Arabic, said her uncle Rami Al-Sheikh. "The little girl Malak was happy tha her sister was coming to the world," he said. The baby would stay in hospital for three to four weeks, said Salama, the doctor. "After that we will see about her leaving, and where this child will go, to the family, to the aunt or uncle or grandparents. Here is the biggest tragedy. Even if this child survives, she was born an orphan," he said. The 13 children were killed in a strike on the second home, belonging to the Abdel Aal family, according to Palestinian health officials. Two women were also killed in that strike. Asked about the casualties in Rafah, an Israeli military spokesperson said various militant targets were struck in Gaza including military compounds, launch posts and armed people."Did you see one man in all of those killed?" said Saqr Abdel Aal, a Palestinian man whose family were among the dead, grieing over the body of a child in a white shroud."All are women and children," he said. "My entire identity has been wiped out, with my wife, children and everyone."Mohammad al-Behairi said his daughter and grandchild were still under the rubble. "It's a feeling of sadness, depression, we have nothing left in this life to cry for, what feeling shall we have? When you lose your children, when you lose the closest of your loved ones, how will your feeling be?" he said.

'WE ÅRE TRAPPED'

Over half of Gaza's 2.3 million people have crowded into Rafah, seeking shelter from the Israeli offensive that has laid waste to much of the Gaza Strip over the last six months. Israel is threatening a ground offensive into the area, where Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu has said fighters from the militant group Hamas must be eliminated to ensure Israel's

Five rockets fired from Iraq towards US military base in Syria: Officials

Mosul. At least five rockets were launched from Iraq's town of Zummar towards a US military base in northeastern Syria on Sunday, two Iraqi security sources told Reuters. The attack against US forces is the first since early February when Iranianbacked groups in Iraq stopped their attacks against US troops. The attack comes one day after Iraqi Prime Minister

Mohammed Shia al-Sudani returned from a visit to the United States and met with President Joe Biden at the White House. Two security sources and a senior army officer said a rocket launcher fixed on the back of a small truck had been parked in Zummar border town with Syria. The military official said the truck caught fire with an explosion from unfired rockets at the same time as warplanes were in the sky."We can't confirm that the truck was bombed by US warplanes unless we investigate it," said a military official on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the incident.Iraqi security forces were deployed in the area and launched a hunt for the perpetrators who fled the area using another vehicle, said a security official who is based in the town of Zummar.An army officer said the truck was seized for further investigation and initial investigation shows that it was destroyed byn air strike."We are communicating with the coalition forces in Iraq to share information on this attack," the officer added. The attacks came one day after a huge blast at a military base in Iraq early on Saturday killed a member of an Iraqi security force that includes Iran-backed groups. The force commander said it was an attack while the army said it was investigating and there were no warplanes in the sky at the time.

Biden slams 'dangerous' anti-Israel protests amid Columbia University chaos

US President Joe Biden has condemned the anti-Israel protests on college campuses amid tension at Columbia University, saying that such antisemitism is "reprehensible and dangerous".

world. US President Joe Biden has slammed anti-Israel protests at universities, saying such "blatant antisemitism" is "reprehensible and dangerous". His statement came amid continued pro-Palestine stir at Columbia University, where the crisis triggered a rabbi to urge Jewish students to stay home until the tense environment at the Ivy League school subsides.Though Biden didn't mention Columbia University in his statement released by the White House, he stressed that antisemitism has "absolutely no place on college campuses, or anywhere in our country". The demonstrations, underway for days, coincide with the Jewish Passover holiday, which is a 7day observance commemorating the mass exodus of Jews from Egypt.The US President said that Jews around the world are still coping with the horrors of Hamas's attack on Israel on October 7 2023. "This Passover falls particularly hard on hostage families trying to honour the spirit of the holiday – a story centered on freedom – while their loved ones remain in captivity. Our hearts are with all the victims, survivors, families, and friends whose loved ones have been killed, taken hostage, wounded, displaced, or are in harm's way," his statement added. He said that his administration would continue to speak out and "aggressively implement the first-ever National Strategy to Counter Antisemitism" to provide the Jewish community with the complete backing of the federal government.Joe Biden's statement came hours after the White House released one independently, condemning the "violence and physical intimidation targeting Jewish students and the Jewish community". White House deputy press secretary Andrew Bates called such acts 'antisemitic, unconscionable, and dangerous", after videos reportedly appeared to show pro-Palestinian activists telling Jewish students that October 7th is "going to be every day for you".The Columbia University crisis escalated recently after university officials testified before the US Congress about antisemitism on campus, causing pro-Palestinian demonstrations on and near campus to surge.On April 19, the varsity's President Nemat Minouche Shafik authorised the York Police Department (NYPD) to raid an encampment of pro-Palestinian protesters, which led to the arrest of 108 protesters. The university has also suspended the daughter of controversial US Congress member Ilhan Omar over the protest. Even then, the protests raged on over the weekend, with protesters putting up tents to participate in the stir. Some 200 protesters protested on Saturday, according to The New York Post.The tension caused Rabbi Elie Buechler, associated with the Ivy League school's Orthodox Union Jewish Learning Initiative on Campus, to "strongly" recommend about 300 - mostly orthodox Jewish students - to go home and stay there. He sent a WhatsApp message to these students, CNN reported."It deeply pains me to say that I would strongly recommend you return home as soon as possible and remain home until the reality in and around campus has dramatically improved," the message read, according to the CNN report.

Calcutta HC cancels 24,000 jobs in SSC scam probe; Mamta Banarjee spells 'its illegal, I challenge it'

RNS: The Calcutta High Court has made a significant decision regarding the recruitment of teaching and non-teaching staff in government-sponsored and government-aided schools. The court has cancelled the recruitment of 24,000 individuals, thereby dismissing the entire 2016 teacher recruitment panel formed by the West Bengal School Service Commission (WBSSC). During the hearing, a division bench comprising Justices Debangshu Basak and Md. Shabbar Rashidi stated that those who were unlawfully recruited must return their salaries within four weeks. Additionally, the bench has ordered a reevaluation of 23 lakh OMR sheets that were used in the recruitment process, and has directed the WBSSC to initiate a new recruitment process.

Several notable individuals, including former state education minister Partha Chatterjee, former primary education board president and Trinamool MLA Manik Bhattacharya, and youth leader Kuntal Ghosh, have been arrested in connection with the scam.

Former Calcutta High Court judge Abhijit Ganguly, now a BJP candidate in the Lok Sabha elections, had previously ordered a Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI) probe into the alleged irregularities in the recruitment process.

In response to the court's decision, West Bengal Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee has called the order "illegal" and has announced plans to challenge it in a higher court. At an election rally in Raiganj, Mamata expressed concern for the affected individuals, stating, "26,000 (24,000) people means 1.5 families. Can anyone return the salary of all these years in just four weeks!"

She further declared her readiness to face any consequences for speaking against the verdict, stating, "I am ready for any defamation case or even going to jail. I will accept punishment for the sake of people."

IRDAI eliminates health insurance age limit

Implements major changes in pre-existing disease policies

RNS I New Delhi: The Insurance Regulatory and Development Authority of India (IRDAI) has made significant changes to health insurance regulations, including the elimination of the age limit for purchasing health insurance plans. This decision, set to take effect on April 1, 2024, marks a major shift in the industry.

Previously, individuals aged 65 and older were restricted from purchasing new health insurance coverage. However, the recent regulatory changes now allow individuals of any age to access new health insurance coverage.

In a notice issued by IRDAI, insurers are encouraged to expand their services to cater to various demographic groups, such as senior citizens, students, children, and maternity needs. The aim is to promote inclusivity in healthcare coverage by offering individualized plans that meet specific agerelated requirements.

The decision reflects IRDAI's commitment to improving the availability of affordable healthcare coverage across all age groups and enhancing accessibility to such coverage. By removing age restrictions, IRDAI hopes to stimulate innovation among insurance companies, leading to a wider range of product offerings and improved customer service.

Additionally, IRDAI mandates that health insurance carriers develop customized plans for older individuals, including dedicated channels for managing claims and complaints from senior citizens. This proactive approach aims to address the unique healthcare needs of elderly policyholders. Industry professionals have welcomed the potential of this regulatory reform to extend healthcare coverage to individuals over the age of 65. With established underwriting procedures, insurance companies can now offer coverage to senior citizens based on affordability and viability criteria. Another significant reform prohibits insurance companies from denying coverage to individuals with severe medical conditions such as cancer, heart or renal failure, or AIDS. The waiting period for coverage of pre-existing conditions has also been reduced from forty-eight months to thirty-six months. After this period, all pre-existing conditions must be covered, regardless of initial disclosure.

Furthermore, IRDAI has mandated a transition from indemnity-based health policies, which reimburse hospital bills, to benefit-based policies, which provide predetermined payments upon the diagnosis of covered illnesses. This change aims to enhance the clarity and predictability of insurance products, ensuring that policyholders receive timely and transparent benefits.

PM Modi's 'those who have more children' remark sparks Opposition furore

After Prime Minister Narendra Modi alleged the Congress, if voted to power, would give the country's wealth to "those who have children", the Opposition hit back and accused the Prime Minister of lying and creating religious divisions between people.

New Delhi: The Opposition came down heavily on Prime Minister Narendra Modi after he alleged that the Congress, if voted to power, would distribute the country's wealth to "those who have more children".Addressing a rally in Rajasthan's Banswara on Sunday, PM Modi hit out at the Congress over its wealth redistribution survey promise and said that the party, if voted to power, would distribute the country's wealth to "infiltrators" and "those who have more children". The Congress hit back and accused PM Modi of lying and creating a divide between Hindus and Muslims. The party rejected the Prime Minister's claims and said their manifesto had no such promise.

Reacting to the Prime Minister's remark, Congress leader Rahul Gandhi said the Prime Minister was attempting to divert the attention of the people from various issues.

'After the disappointment in the first phase of voting, the level of Narendra Modi's lies has fallen so much that out of fear, he now wants to divert the attention of the public from the issues," he tweeted on Sunday."Trends have started coming in regarding the immense support that Congress's 'revolutionary manifesto' is receiving. The country will now vote on its issues, vote for its employment, its family and its future," he said. Senior Congress leader Jairam Ramesh accused PM Modi of using "venomous language" and questioned why the Census, last conducted in 2011, was not done in 2021."The Prime Minister speaks about the world in a venomous language. He should also answer a simple question - Census has been conducted every ten years since 1951. This brings out the actual data of the population of Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes. It should have been conducted in 2021 but has not been done till date," he tweeted on Monday."Why is the Prime Minister silent on this? This is a conspiracy to destroy the Constitution of Babasaheb Ambedkar," he said.AIMIM chief Asaduddin Owaisi accused PM Modi of "abusing" Muslims to get votes and that the community was being feared "while their wealth was being used to enrich others"."PM Modi today (Sunday) called Muslims infiltrators and people with many children. Since 2002 till this day, the only 'Modi guarantee' has been to abuse Muslims and get votes. If one is talking about the country's wealth, one should know that under Modi's rule, the first right to India's wealth has been of his wealthy friends," Owaisi tweeted on Sunday. "1 per cent of Indians own 40 per cent of the country's wealth. Common Hindus are made to fear Muslims while their wealth is being used to enrich others," he said.Former Congress leader and Rajya Sabha MP Kapil Sibal reacted to PM Modi's remark and said he expected "nothing better" from him. "But I feel sad for my country," he said on Monday.Later, in a press conference, Sibal questioned why the Election Commission had not taken action against PM Modi over his remark."I want to ask the Election Commission, why have you not taken any action? You should've criticised and sent a notice asking not to repeat the statement, and taken action under Section 153A of the Penal Code. This is not good either for the country or the Election Commission," he said.In a scathing attack on the Prime Minister, Sibal said, "PM Modi made a speech yesterday. It was evident that the first phase of the election was not going in favour of him. People would be disappointed with it. It referred to minorities as an outsider. What kind of politics is this?""On one hand, you talk Ram Mandir and conduct of Ram, and on the other, spread hatred. Where is Sabka Saath, Sabka

Vikas, and Sabka Vishwas? You can't keep India intact this way," he added. On the other hand, BJP general secretary (organisation) BL Santhosh asserted that the Opposition was "rattled" by PM Modi's speech in Banswara. "With one speech PM @narendramodi has rattled the Opposition. Publishing urban Naxal's agenda of 'redistribution of wealth' has recoiled with double the speed at which it was fired. Go now and explain to voters what @INCIndia and INDIA bloc mean by 'redistribution of wealth'", he wrote on X.During the rally in Banswara, PM Modi cited former Prime Minister Manmohan Singh's remarks that Muslims had the first claim on the country's resources.

"The Congress manifesto says they will calculate the gold with mothers and sisters, get information about it and then distribute that property. They will distribute it to whom? Manmohan Singh's government had said that Muslims have the first right on the country's assets," PM Modi said."This means to whom will this property be distributed? It will be distributed among those who have more children. It will be distributed to the infiltrators. Should your hard-earned money go to the infiltrators? Do you approve of this?" he said.

Case against Shashi Tharoor for 'false campaign' against Rajeev Chandrasekhar

The case against Shashi Tharoor was registered based on a complaint lodged by BJP leader J R Padmakumaar who accused the Congress leader of carrying out a false campaign against Rajeev Chandrasekhar.

New Delhi: Senior Congress leader and Lok Sabha candidate Shashi Tharoor has been booked for allegedly carrying out a false campaign against union minister and rival candidate Rajeev Chandrasekhar, police said here on Sunday.

The case was registered by the Cyber Police here on April 15 but its details were revealed only

The complainant alleged that Tharoor, during the programme, had made defamatory statements against Chandrasekhar with regard to influencing voters of coastal regions in the upcoming Lok Sabha election. The case was registered under Sections 171-G and 500 of the Indian Penal Code and Section 65 of IT Act, a cyber police official said adding that an investigation is going on in the matter. Madhya Pradesh Chief Minister welcomes special breed cows from Andhra Madhya Pradesh Chief Minister Mohan Yadav welcomed a pair of specially brought Punganur cows from Andhra Pradesh.

Bhopal. Madhya Pradesh Chief Minister Mohan Yadav on Sunday welcomed a pair of Punganur cows, specially brought from Andhra Pradesh.Sharing pictures of himself with the special breed cows, the Chief Minister said he was inspired by Prime Minister Narendra Modi in rearing the Punganur cows. He named them Meera and Gopal."Today is a very auspicious day, a very auspicious time, when fortunately a special breed of Punganur cow and Nandi have arrived at our residence from Andhra Pradesh. It is extremely pious to bless one's life by serving mother cows. Mother cow 'Meera' and Nandi Maharaj 'Gopal' ji are heartily welcomed at our residence," he wrote on X.

The Punganur cow is a dwarf cattle breed native to the Chittoor district of Andhra Pradesh, India. It is one of the world's smallest humped cattle breeds."The Punganur breed of cow with short legs and small stature was on the verge of extinction, but with the inspiration of the Honorable Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi ji, efforts are now being made to conserve this breed of cow not only in Andhra Pradesh but also in other places of the country," Yadav added.In January, on the occasion of Makar Sankranti, a video of Prime Minister Narendra Modi caressing and feeding a Punganur cow at his residence was released, and it went viral, grabbing everyone's attention to the rare breed"I pray at the feet of Mother Cow, who provides shelter to 33 Crore deities, that she may continue to shower her blessings on the people of the state and bless everyone," he said. The Chief Minister already has a cow named Lakshmi at his residence.

Petition Seeking "Extraordinary Interim Bail" For Arvind Kejriwal Scrapped

A bench headed by Acting Chief Justice Manmohan remarked that the petition was "totally misconceived" and that the court cannot grant "extraordinary interim bail" to a person holding a high office.

New Delhi: The Delhi High Court on Monday dismissed with ? 75,000 costs a public interest litigation by a law student seeking "extraordinary interim bail" for Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal, who is in judicial custody in relation a money laundering case stemming from the alleged excise

A bench headed by Acting Chief Justice Manmohan remarked that the petition was "totally misconceived" and that the court cannot grant 'extraordinary interim bail" to a person holding a high office."Does he (the petitioner) attend classes in college? It seems he is not following principles of law," the bench also comprising Justice Manmeet PS Arora said.

The court remarked that the AAP leader has the means to take steps to avail his legal remedies and the petitioner holds no power of attorney to make submissions on his behalf."Person is taking steps in accordance with law. Who are you? You have some exaggerated notion of yourself. You say you have veto power. That you will give an undertaking

(to ensure Kejriwal does not influce witness)." the court stated. The court emphasised that the concept of equality and Rule of Law were enshrined in the Constitution and Kejriwal was in judicial custody pursuant to judicial orders which were not challenged."Writ petition is dismissed with costs of ? 75,000," the court ordered. Senior advocate Rahul Mehra, appearing of Kejriwal, said the PIL was "ambush" litigation which was not maintainable and the petitioner has no locus. The petitioner's counsel sought "extraordinary interim bail" for the Delhi chief minister on the grounds that his safety was in danger as he was confined with hardcore criminals. The PIL said that to fulfil the responsibilities of the chief minister, Kejriwal's physical presence was required in his office and home to take quick decisions on all issues and to pass orders in the welfare of the public at large. The petitioner, a law student, mentioned his name as, "We, the people of India" in the plea claiming that he does not want any name, fame or money from this matter.

The petition also said the petitioner has "decided, by using his 'veto power', to release" on extraordinary interim bail Kejriwal in all the criminal cases lodged by the ED and CBI pending against him till the completion of his tenure and the

"With Folded Hands...": Tejashwi Yadav's Plea After PM's Rajasthan Speech

Congress MP Rahul Gandhi had hit out at PM Modi's speech, calling it "lies", and AIMIM chief Asaduddin Owaisi said the Prime Minister's only 'guarantee' is "to abuse Muslims and get votes".

New Delhi: Prime Minister Narendra Modi's controversial election speech in Rajasthan - in which he referred to the declared the Congress, should it win the 2024 general election will "distribute assets among infiltrators" has drawn an emotional plea from Rashtriya Janata Dal leader Tejashwi Yadav. "I have only this to say to the Prime Minister... and I say this with folded hands. Please talk about the real issues and set aside this politics of hate. The nation's youth and elderly, farmers and businessmen, and mothers and sisters... all people have the same issues," the former Bihar Deputy Chief Minister said.

Everybody wants to find jobs to overcome poverty and deal with the rising cost of living... so again I ask the Prime Minister to discuss these real issues and tell us, in the past 10 years, what you have done for the country reporters in Patna. What is you real vision for Bihar... for the nation? He is not talking about this and, instead, is shouting about temples (referring to the Ram Temple in Ayodhya, construction of which the BJP has made a central election issue) and Muslims. This is not good..."Mr Modi's speech in Rajasthan's Banswara this weekend has triggered furious pushback from the opposition and a section of civil society activists. Congress MP Rahul Gandhi hit out at the "lies" and AIMIM chief Asaduddin Owaisi said the Prime Minister's only 'guarantee' is "to abuse Muslims..."Samajwadi Party boss and former Uttar Pradesh Chief Minister Akhilesh Yadav - who is part of the Congress-led INDIA opposition bloc also called out the Prime Minister's "lies".

What Did PM Modi Say In Rajasthan?

and for Bihar?" Mr Yadav told At Banswara on Sunday, Mr Modi had said, "This 'urban Naxal' mindset, mothers and sisters, they will not even leave your 'mangalsutra'. They can go to that level... Congress manifesto says they will calculate the gold with mothers and sisters, get information about it, and then distribute that property. They will distribute it to whom - Manmohan Singh's government had said Muslims have first right on assets." Earlier, when their (Congress) government was in power, they said Muslims have the first right on the country's assets. This means to whom will this property be distributed? It will be distributed among those who have more children. It will be distributed to the infiltrators. Should your hardearned money go to the infiltrators? Do you approve of this?" he said.

What Did Manmohan Singh Say In

Mr Modi was referring to a statement by February, calling him an "inspirational example" - in December 2006 at a meeting of the National Development Council on the fiscal priorities of his government.According to the then Prime Minister's Office, Dr Singh had said, "... We will have to devise innovative plans to ensure that minorities, particularly the Muslim minority, are empowered to share equitably in the fruits of development. They must have first claim on resources..."

then Prime Minister Manmohan Singh PM Modi vs Congress Before Polls whom he lavished praise in Mr Modi's sharp swipe Sunday comes as he and the ruling BJP ramp up attacks on the Congress and the INDIA bloc. Earlier, in Rajasthan's Jalore, he claimed the country would "punish" the party for its "sins".

Mr Modi and the BJP earlier also accused the Congress' election manifest of being a "Muslim League imprint" and a "bundle of lies". "Congress issued a bundle of lies in its manifesto... every page reeks of attempts to tear India apart. It reflects the thoughts the Muslim League had before independence," the PM had said at a poll rally in Uttar Pradesh's Saharanpur. The comment drew a fierce retort from Congress boss Mallikarjun Kharge. In a strong swipe at the BJP and its ideological mentor, the Rashtriya Swayamsevak Sangh, he said, "Everyone knows how (Syama) Prasad Mookerjee "formed his governments in Bengal, Sindh, and NWFP (North West Frontier Province).

RANCHI I 23 April 2024

Congress slow off the blocks

IT is indeed tempting to do crystal-gazing and predict poll results based on news reports, political briefings and conjecture. In fact, most of the time, that is what passes off as election prognosis. Then, like astrologers, political commentators too rationalise their failed predictions, blaming them, instead of the planets, on the politicians: "If only they had done this and that and the other." So, one is carefully desisting from any attempt at poll prediction. But it was hard to miss the brouhaha over allegations of a polling company deleting its X post and also about a fake survey. The allegedly deleted post from pollster Pradeep Gupta's Axis My India handle talks of a fierce battle ahead for the BJP in 13 states; and then there were survey results being attributed to the same company, claiming that the NDA was losing the polls. Soon, Axis My India clarified that this information was fake and that the company only did exit polls, not opinion polls.

But it indeed looks like the BJP is in for a tough contest in many states where it had swept the polls in 2019. Then, for the Opposition to benefit from such a close fight, it ought to be prepared to slug it out with the BJP. A fake survey or a deleted by the content of the property of the content of the conten X post are not going to be enough to take on the juggernaut that is rolling relentlessly. The polling has begun, the first round is over, but the Congress is not yet ready. Being in Chandigarh, it is impossible not to be affected by the theatre of the absurd opportunism that is playing out in this beautiful city. In fact, the neighbourhood's beauty often hides its bulging underbelly of quid pro quos. It is a bipolar contest in the city and hence easier to campaign, contest and possibly win for either of the two parties — the BJP and the Congress. The first party to announce its candidate was the BJP.Despite having four strong contenders — a sitting MP, a former MP and two former city party chiefs — there was not a murmur of dissent from those who missed out over the choice of the candidate. The announcement of the nominee was followed by the launch of the campaign. But not for the Congress. After its candidate was announced, a former MP, who was defeated in the last two polls, kicked up a storm of protest instead of the

There was nothing but infighting being talked about in the local media for about a week. Finally, an emissary from the high command had to fly in to mollify the defeated, but defiant, leader. What the high command's assurance — a euphemism for quid pro quo for the sake of peace is anybody's guess. In the neighbouring constituency of Patiala in Punjab, the Congress has a candidate who had defeated the incumbent in 2014 with his clean image of being an idealistic, patient-friendly doctor. But that is not enough for local Congressmen.Instead of seeking votes, all that is being done by local Congress leaders is bickering in Patiala, when there is but a little over a month left for polling. Punjab's voters have no dearth of options: it is a four-cornered fight between the ruling AAP, prime Opposition party Congress, the Shiromani Akali Dal and the BJP. Yet, the Congress is hesitant to announce all the candidates, and none of the other three parties has displayed backbiting of this magnitude. AAP has declared all 13 candidates and has started its campaign in full throttle. If at all a party has to be the choice of the disenchanted voter, the least it has to display is an intent to put up a good fight, not exhibit a divided house.

Haryana is going to the polls only Son May 25, yet the BJP announced all its candidates in late March itself. Haryana, like Punjab, ought to be one of the difficult states where the BJP could find the going tough. The BJP has named former state Congress president Ashok Tanwar and former MP Naveen Jindal among its nominees, and they have all hit the ground running in a desperate attempt to stem the anti-incumbency tide. Sushil Gupta, the lone candidate of AAP, which is part of the INDIA bloc, is also campaigning hard. But the Congress has not yet announced its nine candidates in the state.

How framing of survey questions makes a great difference

For creating a questionnaire that yields relevant, reliable results, it's essential to comprehend how people respond to questions.

IN an episode titled The Grand Design of the BBC's TV series Yes, Prime Minister, British PM Jim Hacker attempted to impose conscription; his private secretary, Bernard Woolley, had a survey done that showed support for the idea among the British. But Sir Humphrey Appleby, the Cabinet Secretary, showed Woolley how public surveys could reach contradictory conclusions by asking a series of leading questions and posing the central query in a particular

This February, around four decades after the series was aired, market research organisation Ipsos carried out an intriguing survey in the UK. A representative quota sample of 2,158 British citizens, aged between 16 and 75 years, were questioned; half of the respondents were asked 'Sample A' questions, reflecting a positive view about national service. The other half saw 'Sample B', reflecting a negative view. A comparison of the results demonstrated that there were differences in the responses obtained on the degree of support for the reintroduction of national service in Britain, depending on how a question was posed, and the questions that come before it. In Sample A, 38 per cent were against reintroduction of conscription and 45 per cent favoured it. In Sample B, in contrast, 38 per cent supported it and 48 per cent opposed it. One of the most important steps in ensuring a survey's success is drafting the questionnaire. For creating a questionnaire that overcomes the biases and shortcomings of human cognition and yields relevant, reliable results, it's essential to comprehend how people think and respond to questions.

In psychology, single questions are highly significant, yet they are often contentious. Daniel Kahneman, an Israeli-American psychologist and a pioneer of behavioural economics, provided an intriguing example with a fictional woman named Linda, 41, who studied philosophy, participated in anti-nuclear protests and was involved in political activities. "How likely is she to be a bank teller? Or how likely is she to be a bank teller who's also active in the feminist movement?" asked Kahneman, recipient of the 2002 Nobel Prize in economics. It defies sense that 90 per cent of the respondents said she was more likely to be a feminist bank teller. However, to be a feminist bank teller, she also had to be a bank teller, which was the first option. But if the question is posed in this manner, the majority of the people will be misled. Thus, it's not only the question you ask—it's also how you phrase it allowances than to losses or prohibitions. Kahneman

Consider another example from 1980s' Britain. In a 1986 Gallup poll, 40 per cent of the respondents indicated that having nuclear weapons made them feel 'safe', while 50 per cent said they didn't (the remaining had no definite opinion). However, these percentages changed when a different pollster substituted the word 'safer' for 'safe': 50 per cent of the respondents claimed that nuclear weapons made them feel safer, while 36 per cent said these made them feel less safe.

In June 1969, Gallup conducted a survey to find out how the US public felt about the 'faster' or 'slower' withdrawal of troops from Vietnam, following then President Richard Nixon's order to withdraw 25,000 troops in three months. Although 'same as now' was not listed as an option, interviewers accepted respondents' answers if they stated it out of the blue. As for the respondents, 42 per cent claimed it was 'faster', 16 per cent said it was 'slower' and 29 per cent said it was 'same as now'. "In general, do you feel the pace at which the President is withdrawing troops is too fast, too slow or about right?" was the question Harris used in a similar survey shortly after the Gallup poll. In response, 49 per cent of the participants opined that the pace was about right, 29 per cent wanted a faster withdrawal and 6 per cent thought it was too fast. But why the disparity in these two polls? Well, they were different — Gallup didn't include an explicit middle n actuality, people react differently to gains or allowances than to losses or prohibitions. Kahneman and Amos Tversky popularised the concept of 'framing'. In a 1981 publication, they modelled a fictitious outbreak of an unusual Asian disease that was predicted to claim 600 lives. Two alternative plans to combat the outbreak were put forth. If Program A was implemented, 200 lives would be saved. In Programme

B, there was a one-third chance that 600 people would be saved and a two-third chance that none would be. In their survey, 72 per cent of the respondents were risk-averse and would rather save 200 lives than take a chance on saving a higher number. Subsequently, a second poll was carried out to choose between Programmes C and D, which had identical outcomes but different descriptions. The adoption of Programme C would result in 400 deaths. Programme D had a twothird chance of 600 deaths and a onethird chance that no one would die. Despite the fact that C and D were quantitatively equal to A and B, 78 per cent of the respondents now became risk-seekers and would rather gamble than accept the certain loss of 400 lives.

In his 2011 book Thinking, Fast and Slow, Kahneman tried to pinpoint the causes of such uncertainty. He clarified how people's thought processes were a result of the combination of two distinct systems. The gut reaction or 'System 1' is "fast, intuitive and emotional". 'System 2' is described as "slower, more deliberative, and more logical". System 2 necessitates effort and concentration, whereas System 1 functions naturally and without conscious thinking, which typically comes into play initially. Only when it's deemed necessary is System 2 activated. There you are, Bernard. The perfectly balanced sample, I have demonstrating how different question formats might produce contradictory survey results. However, when they come across the findings of a public opinion survey, people seldom think about whether the questions were filtered, whether a 'middle category' was included among the alternatives, whether the questions were framed in terms of gains or losses, how the questions were posed and what were the questions that came before any particular one, and other related issues. Unfortunately, most people just assume that it's Sir Humphrey's 'perfectly balanced sample'.

Cut sugar & salt

A call for health-oriented action in food industry

Nestlé's responsive approach to reducing added sugars, sodium and saturated fats in its products and aligning with global dietary guidelines over the years reflects the market risk faced by a company failing to recognise the importance of providing healthy options. From revising sodium levels in Maggi Masala Noodles to cutting sucrose content in infant cereals, the FMCG (fast-moving consumer goods) giant has been trying to foster healthier lifestyles to giant has been trying to foster healthier lifestyles to remain on top of the business. However, the latest allegations about higher sugar content in its baby food in developing countries like India are worrisome and warrant an investigation. Adherence to regulations is crucial to rebuilding trust and nutritional integrity. Similarly, IndiGo's response to concerns about the sodium levels in on-board meals emphasises the need for transparency.Consumer awareness is pivotal in shaping food choices and driving industry practices. As people become more informed about the health implications of their dietary decisions, companies face pressure to prioritise nutritious alternatives and provide accurate information about the ingredients. The food industry must reassess its practices and the food regulators strengthen their enforcement strategies. This need is particularly significant in India, where the burden of nutrition-related noncommunicable diseases, such as diabetes, obesity and cardiovascular ailments, is rapidly escalating. Addressing these challenges requires concerted efforts from consumers and the food industry to promote healthier eating habits. Initiatives such as the taxation of the addictive high-fat sugar salt foods offer a glimmer of hope.

R ollercoaster journey of India's political economy

Rahul Gandhi's image of being anti-business and pro-poor made him suspect in the eyes of the capitalist class. In contrast, Modi successfully projected a pro-business image.

LET me begin with a provocation — the Congress ceased to be a national party in 1998. If it came to power in 2004 and then consolidated its hold five years later, it was because it represented regional aspirations.

To understand this, we need to perform a couple of thought experiments. Imagine that, in 2004, Chandrababu Naidu and his party's ally, the BJP, had managed to hold on to their numbers in Andhra Pradesh. Then, the Congress would have slid to become the second largest party, down to 121 seats, the BJP would have risen to 145, and the NDA would have got 220 seats across India.

Now, imagine that the BJP had decided to stick with the DMK in 2004 and not align with Jayalalithaa's party. As it turned out, the decision to switch allies in Tamil Nadu cost the NDA dear: The AIADMK was extremely unpopular, and the DMK-Congress alliance swept all 39 seats in the state. If the BJP had held on to the DMK, there was a chance that the NDA could have swept the state.Andhra Pradesh and Tamil Nadu effectively changed the course of Indian politics in 10 years. If they had held on to the NDA, its all-India tally would have been 239 seats, and Atal Bihari Vajpayee would have returned to power. The Congress would have dropped to 111 seats, lower than what it had got in 1999, and perhaps, its decline would have been hastened by a decade. Why have I chosen these two southern states? Because they tell an important story about India's political economy - how it evolved in the postliberalisation period and changed the fortunes of India's grand old party. A big part of this was the rise of new entrepreneurial groups, which were hitherto unable to make a dent during the 'licence quota Raj'.

Economic journalist Harish Damodaran has chronicled the change that took place in the composition of 'India's New Capitalists' and showed how new castecommunities were able to break through the monopolistic grip of the traditional mercantile groups from the mid-1990s. Each of these 'new capitalists' emerged within the domestic markets of their states. Leading the charge were the Andhra capitalists — the Kamma, Reddy, and Raju entrepreneurs — who had initially made money in local enterprises, and then expanded into infrastructure during Chandrababu's rule. In 2004, a section of the entrepreneurial class in Andhra Pradesh switched its allegiance to YS Rajasekhara Reddy (YSR), who swept to power and gave the Congress its largest contingent of MPs. Andhra Inc became the biggest infrastructure and power companies during UPA-1 -GMR, GVK, Lanco, IVRCL, Gayatri Projects, to name a few. The grapevine in the corridors of power those days was that the rise of the captains of industry from Andhra Pradesh was a testimony to YSR's clout in

New Delhi.
The rise of Tamil entrepreneurs was less spectacular but equally significant. Tamil Nadu has been recognised as one of India's most business-friendly states, even if the overt political rhetoric of the main Dravidian parties has been left of centre. As early as 1996, a report of the National Council of Applied Economic Research had ranked the state as the most reform-oriented. John Harris and Andrew Wyatt's research shows that successive governments in Tamil Nadu have favoured a private sector-led development model, which has ensured a stable two-party political system. The so-called 'national' parties are entirely dependent on what the DMK or AIADMK is willing to give them.

The new 'regional' capitalists who emerged during the late 1990s could still not have competed with the traditional mercantile-industrial caste-communities, had it not been for the massive financial bubble that developed across the world from the early 2000s. In India, new entrepreneurs got access to PSU bank funds, partly because of their growing heft in the corridors of power. But the stock market boom of 2005-08 also allowed them to raise money from the public. This led to an unrealistic credit-fuelled investment boom in infrastructure, steel and power, which came a cropper once the global financial crisis of 2008-09 caused a collapse of valuations. These companies, which lived off their market capitalisation, as opposed to real earnings, suddenly found that they could no longer raise funds to finance their operations. The result was what came to be known as India's NPA (non-performing assets) crisis, where mega loans given by banks turned bad.By 2011-12, many of the biggest 'new capitalists' unravelled under the weight of their debt burdens.

Banks took over their assets and sold them to big companies with secure profits and big piles of cash reserves. What resulted was a massive consolidation in almost every industry. Babus and bankers who had cleared projects or granted large loans came under the scanner as companies began to collapse around them. The response from the bureaucratic-managerial class was to withdraw into its shell, refusing to clear files or expedite project finance. The media gave this a name - 'policy paralysis'. Coincidentally, this was also the time when big business expanded its control over the news media by beginning to pick up stakes in media companies. The pricking of the credit bubble also burst the 'new capitalist' balloon that had threatened to overwhelm 'old' capital in the 2000s.

From the 2010s, the Indian economy has increasingly gone into the hands of monopoly capital—big conglomerates, echoing the Zaibatsus and Chaebols of Asian capitalist powers.

Could the Congress have ridden this wave? After all, it had strong ties with old business houses since the time of the 'licence quota Raj'. This is where leadership made a difference. Rahul Gandhi's image of being antibusiness and pro-poor naturally made him suspect in the eyes of India's capitalist class. In contrast, Narendra Modi successfully projected the image of being a business-friendly leader. As early as January 2009, corporate honchos like Sunil Bharti Mittal and Anil Ambani had said that Modi had the qualities to lead the nation. India Inc chose to back Modi, and it has had no cause to regret its decision.

हालांकि, कुछ लोगों को यह क्योंकि पीठ को बहुत अजीब तरीके से विचार पसंद नहीं आया।एक एक्स मोड़ना पड़ता है।

यजर ने पोस्ट किया. इंजीनियरिंग समय की बर्बादी है। ऐसा कोई तरीका नहीं है जिससे कोई भी गाडी चलाते समय सिक्रय रूप से एप्लिकेशन का उपयोग कर सके और टाइपिंग के मामले में इसका उपयोग करना मुश्किल है

लड़का हो या लड़की आजकल हर कोई गोरा और चमकदार चेहरा पाना चाहता है, जिस पर न तो पिंपल के दाग-धब्बे हो न ही झुरियां। वैसे तो जैसा हमारा खाना-पीना होगा, वैसे ही हमारे फेस और बालों की ग्रोथ होगी। अगर हमारा आहार पौष्टिक तत्वों से भरपूर नहीं है तो उसका असर हमारे चेहरे और बालों पर पड़ता है लेकिन खाने के साथ-साथ चेहरे और बालों की अलग से केयर करने की भी जरूरत होती है। इसके लिए आज के यंगस्टर्स महंगे से महंगे ब्यूटी प्रॉडक्ट्स का इस्तेमाल करते हैं लेकिन अगर कास्मेटिक की बजाए अगर घरेलू नुस्खों का इस्तेमाल किया जाए तो बेहतर है क्योंकि इनका न तो कोई साइड इफैक्ट होता है और न ही पैसे की बर्बादी होती है। उबले हुए चावल का पानी जिसे हम मांड कहते हैं,

सेहत के लिए बहुत ही फायदेमंद होती है लेकिन शायद आप यह नहीं जानते होंगे कि यह पानी सेहत के साथ साथ स्किन के लिए बहुत ज्यादा फायदेमंद है। इससे आपकी खूबसूरती में चार चांद लग जाएंगे। हफ्ते में एक बार इस घरेलू तरीके को अपना कर आप सौंदर्य सबंधी कई समस्याओं से निजात पा सकते हैं।

रिकन के लिए चावल का पानी

It was a hardfought win, I won't say that it came in a platter," concluded the spinner.

D Gukesh dissects Candidates triumph: Proving Magnus Carlsen wrong and more

New Delhi.17-year-old D Gukesh said he had come to know about legendary Magnus Carlsen's pre-tournament prediction before the Candidates and the noise around it did not affect his confidence. Battling against the odds, Grandmaster Gukesh stunned the 8man field, winning the Candidates to become the youngest-ever challenge for the World Championship crown. Gukesh finished with 9 points out of a total of 14 to leave the likes of seasoned pros in Hikaru Nakamura, Fabiano Caruana and Ian Nepomniachtchi

Speaking exclusively to India Today, D Gukesh said he was confident about his winning ability despite having qualified for the Candidates as the last amongst the three Indian contenders. While R Praggnanandhaa qualified for the Candidates after finishing as runner-up at the World Cup, Vidit Gujrathi made it to the Candidates via Grand Swiss. Gukesh came up with impressive performances at the World Cup and Grand Swiss, but it was not enough for him to seal a place in the Candidates. The Chennai man worked his way through to the 8-man field as the second-placed player in the FIDE Circuit after Caruana, the winner, booked his place via the World Cup."I actually came to know about that a couple of days before the Candidates. Honestly, I didn't care much about it. I think he gave an honest opinion. Obviously, I was not the favourite there. There were far more experienced players," Gukesh said on Monday, April 22 from Toronto. Deep down, I already knew that if I was in my absolute best shape, and if I managed to stay calm and focused, I could win the tournament. Yeah, Magnus sharing his opinion did not really affect that belief in myself," he added.

Virender Sehwag slams Sam Curran after PBKS vs GT: Wouldn't have him in my team

Virender Sehwag slammed Sam Curran's performances so far in the IPL 2024 season and claimed he wouldn't have the all-rounder in his side. Curran hasn't had the best of times this season as he has failed to inspire Punjab with both bat and ball.

New Delhi.Virender Sehwag has slammed PBKS stand-in skipper Sam Curran, saying that he wouldn't have him in the team as a batting or a bowling all-rounder as Punjab slumped to their 6th loss of the season.

Curran scored 20 off 19 balls and picked up one wicket from his two overs as he conceded 18 runs. GT would end up winning the match as PBKS' Mullanpur struggles continued. Speaking to Cricbuzz, Sehwag was very critical of Curran performances with both bat and ball, saying that a person who is doing some batting and bowling isn't helping the side. The former India cricketer said that he needs to help the side with either the bat or with the ball, which he feels the England all-rounder has struggled to do all season."I wouldn't keep Sam Curran as a batting all-rounder or a bowling all-rounder. Because such a player is of no use, who does some batting and some bowling. Either you win the game with your batting or win the game with your bowling. Either you hit the bullseye or you don't perform at all," said Sehwag. How well has Curran fared this season?

Curran started things off with a fine performance with the bat against DC as he scored 63 to get PBKS off to a winning start. However, since then, the England allrounder has struggled to make any impact with the ball or bat. In 8 matches so far, Curran has just 153 runs to his name with an average of 19. Curran had scored 276 runs last season in the IPL at an average of

In terms of bowling, while he has picked up 11 wickets, the economy rate has been 8.79 and he decided to only use himself twice against GT.Curran and Punjab will next be in action against KKR at the Eden Gardens on Friday, April 26 as they look to end their losing streak and return back to winning ways. The defeat to Gujarat means that PBKS are 9th on the table.

Absolute disaster: Tom Moody tears into 'reckless' PBKS batters after 'meltdown' vs GT

New Delhi. Tom Moody lashed out at the PBKS batters for their 'reckless' approach while facing spinners against GT in the Indian Premier League (IPL) 2024 match on Sunday in Mullanpur. Punjab slumped to their sixth loss after losing to Gujarat by 3 wickets and are struggling at the ninth position in the table with 4 points and a net run rate of -0.292.Moody was critical of the PBKS batters, saying that they faltered against the spin trio of Noor Ahmed, Rashid Khan and Sai Kishore. After Sam Curran and Prabhsimran Singh put on 52 runs off 5.3 overs, PBKS completely lost their way and were bowled out for 142 in 20

Very poor, extremely poor with their spin management. 7/68 off spin was an absolute disaster. It was the way the players got out against spin that would be frustrating me the most. It looked reckless. I get the fact that you need to be proactive and busy," Moody told ESPNcricinfo."Yes, GT have a good spin attack, but they would have gone into this contest knowing that would have been the challenge. It looked like a complete Prabhsimran should have taken responsibility'

Former Indian batter Wasim Jaffer also sounded critical of the Punjab batters for throwing their wickets away. Prabhsimran scored 35 runs off 21 balls before Mohit Sharma accounted for his wicket. Jaffer reckoned that the youngster should have carried on to get a big score."Punjab have themselves to blame. Prabhsimran gave them a decent start, but he should have kicked on and got a much bigger score. I thought he should have taken a lot of responsibility," Jaffer said."When you have got so many players who are out of form and not scoring runs, you get days like these," Jaffer added.PBKS are next set to face Shreyas Iyer's KKR on Friday, April 26 at the iconic

Shubman Gill will lead Indian team in near future, says Robin Uthappa

New Delhi.Robin Uthappa feels that Shubman Gill will lead the Indian team in the near future after the Indian star helped GT secure a win against PBKS on Sunday, April 21. Gill scored a crucial 35 as GT got over the finishing line in the end in Mullanpur. This was Gill's 4th win as captain of Gujarat, since taking over as skipper before the start of the season. Speaking to JioCinema after GT's 3-wicket win, Uthappa hailed Gill as a gift for Indian cricket and claimed that star batter is slowly maturing into an all-time great. The former cricketer also said that Gill is slowly becoming a very prolific leader and could lead the national team as well."Yeah, I think he's a gift for Indian cricket. I think he's some who's maturing into an all time great within the Indian cricket fraternity. And I think, we've seen him thrive, and we're seeing him grow into a very prolific leader who is going to lead not just his IPL side, but I also think the Indian team in the near future," said Gill.

Gill needed someone to play aggressive:

Uthappa

50 per cent of his match fees for While talking about his innings of 35, Uthappa said that the GT skipper went about it in the right way. However, the former cricketer feels that Gill needs someone to play aggressively at the other end.

Uthappa said that Gill got out trying to up the ante and felt Sai Sudharsan would soon transition into an aggressive batter to help the GT skipper."Great innings. I thought he went about his innings the right way because it's important for him to bat through the course of the innings for GT to get success, so he approached it in that fashion. He needed someone to play a little bit more aggressively at the end and take off pressure from him so that he could play that.""So, when he went to up the ante is when he got out. He didn't need to do that. Sai Sudarshan could have done it. But you know, I think that Sai Sudarsan transition into upping his strike rate also will happen in due time. And when that happens, I think that combination will be great," said
