School vice-principal stabbed to death by her brother-inlaw

Gurgaon. A 39-year-old woman – vice-principal at a private school – was stabbed to death by her brother-inlaw at their house in Shivaji Park on Saturday night.

Nidhi Kaushik was attacked by Navneet in front of her 20-year-old son Aradhya, who tried to save her. Both Aradhya and Navneet suffered injuries in the scuffle and had to be hospitalised. Nidhi lived with her husband Naveen and Aradhya on the fourth floor of their building in Shivaji Park. Navneet, her brother-in-law, stayed on the third floor with his family. The first two floors housed Adarsh Public School, where Nidhi was the vice-principal.DCP (west) Karan Goel said Navneet was addicted to alcohol and had been released from a rehab centre a couple of months ago. The cops are trying to find out the motive behind the murder.

Navneet is undergoing treatment at Safdarjung Hospital. He is not fit to give a statement now," said inspector Sandeep Kumar of Shivaji Nagar police station. "Aradhya, who tried to save his mother, was treated for some wounds and discharged from hospital. His mother was declared dead on arrival at Medanta hospital."Police said they received a call from Nidhi's neighbours around 8.40pm on Saturday. Aradhya lodged a police complaint after being treated for his wounds."I was on the second floor when I heard my mother cry for help. I rushed to the top floor, where the door to the terrace was latched from the other side," Aradhya – a BBA student – mentioned in his complaint. "I went to the terrace of the adjacent building and jumped to our terrace from there. When I barged into my mother's room, I saw my uncle attack her with a knife. I tried to stop him, but I was attacked too," he added.Other members of the family intervened and took Nidhi to hospital. But she had died by then.

Nidhi's husband Naveen works as a private firm employee and was not at home when she was attacked.

'Her brother-in-law was so addicted to drinking that the family had to admit him to a de-addiction centre a few months ago. After his treatment, Navneet returned home two months ago. As of now, we are not yet aware of the murder motive. Other members of the family were on different floors when she was attacked," DCP Goel said. As Navneet too suffered multiple wounds on the chest, police suspect he was either stabbed by Aradhya or his mother in self-defence.

A case was registered against Navneet under sections 323 (voluntarily causing hurt) and 302 (murder) of the IPC. Her body was handed over to her family after an

At the time, he was living on the premises of the school campus along with colleagues Nagender Singh of Fatehpur, and Rakshapal of Raebareli, UP.According to the complaint by another school staffer Dayaram, the incident took place in the early hours of Sept 13, 2007.Kamal allegedly attacked Nagender and Rakshapal with an iron rod over a "grudge", Dayaram said."When I went to sleep at 10pm on Sept 12, Nagender, Kamal and Rakshakpal were consuming liquor on the school premises. After midnight, I heard some noise and came out of the room. I found Nagender leaning against the wall near the school's main gate in an unconscious condition. He was bleeding. To recoup life while it's still throbbing

In August 2022, Salman Rushdie was almost killed for being "disingenuous". That was one of the reasons put forth by the writer's would-be assassin, who confessed to having read only two pages of 'The Satanic Verses'. Rushdie's fourth novel was also his most controversial. Published in 1988, it had sparked a fatwa, launched a thousand protests, triggered numerous killings (including that of the Japanese translator of the book) and compelled Rushdie to live under the shadow of death. Though he had anticipated an attack in the decade after the fatwa, it had somewhat receded until the murderous attack on his "last innocent evening" in upstate New York, where Rushdie was to ironically give a talk on the safety of writers. Death, or rather the nearness of it, is what Rushdie reflects on in his new book 'Knife: Meditations After an Attempted Murder'.

How do writers under the shadow of death confront it, grapple with it every day, and yet make meaning out of it and use it as material? Is death a battle to be fought and won, an inevitability to be made peace with, or a fear that haunts till the last living breath? Poet John Donne throws a gauntlet of irreverence at "proud" death, when he says, "Mighty and dreadful, for, thou art not so/ For, those, whom thou think'st, thou dost overthrow/ Die not, poor death, nor yet canst thou kill me."

If death made several failed encounters with Rushdie, it was an "imposing itinerant visitor" for Paul Kalanithi, the young neurosurgeon who faced it with equanimity and courage. Diagnosed with stage 4 lung cancer at the age of 36, Kalanithi writes in his memoir 'When Breath Becomes Air', "I began to realise that coming face to face with my own mortality, in a sense, had changed nothing and everything." Nothing, because he knew someday he would have to die though he didn't know when. Everything, because now he knew it more acutely. There was also the more profound realisation that "even when I'm dying, until I actually die, I am still living". In the case of both Rushdie and Kalanithi, it is love and language that illuminate their lives in their darkest phases. Both harness the power of literature to recoup life while it's still throbbing. "Language was my knife," Rushdie ruminates in 'Knife', "the knife I could use to fight back" and a tool to reclaim his world, while Kalanithi, "searching for a vocabulary with which to make sense of death", found it in writing. "Words," he writes, "have a longevity I do not."

Christopher Hitchens, the literary world's best known contrasion to the heaven that "Grapliet in

Christopher Hitchens, the literary world's best known contrarian, too, became that "finalist in the race for life" when he was diagnosed with esophageal cancer and recollects how he had been in denial for long. "But I can't see myself smiting my brow with shock or hear myself whining about how it's all so unfair: I have been taunting the Reaper into taking a free scythe in my direction and have now succumbed to something so predictable and banal that it bores even me," Hitchens writes in his memoir 'Mortality' that documents a very public dying.

"I have more than once in my time woken up feeling like death" is how Hitchens begins the book. He details his diagnosis as "a very gentle and firm deportation" into the land of malady, a land that he says is quite welcoming, where "everybody smiles encouragingly and there appears to be absolutely no racism" though the humour in this new country is "a touch feeble and repetitive" and the cuisine the worst of any destination. Then comes the rather numbing realisation that "I don't have a body, I am a body".

More pervasive though is the wry Hitchensian humour, when he describes how "the novelty of a diagnosis of malignant cancer has a tendency to wear off... even to become banal. One can become quite used to the spectre of the eternal Footman, like some lethal old bore lurking in the hallway at the end of the evening, hoping for the chance to have a word". Are life and death therefore two mutually exclusive or mutually constitutive binaries? Philosopher Jacques Derrida, mining for some understanding of this quandary from science, philosophy and psychoanalysis, argued that death must be considered neither as the opposite of life, nor as the truth or fulfilment of it, but rather as that which both limits life and makes it possible.

Navy women script sailing history

Amid the hype and hoopla of the IPL, a significant sporting achievement has been relegated to the margins. On April 21, Lieutenant Commanders Dilna K and Roopa A, two Indian Navy officers, completed a historic transoceanic voyage on the Indian Naval Sailing Vessel (INSV) Tarini. In the process, they became the first Indian women to achieve the distinction of undertaking a transoceanic expedition in double-handed mode. The two travelled by sea, to Mauritius and back, propelling on wind power alone. They spent nearly two months on a small sailing vessel braving rough seas, strong winds, high waves, treacherous currents and much else that nature throws at you in the wilderness of oceans. While India has in its ocean sailing catalogue feats of solo sailing and sailing by a group of people (usually six), this is the first time it has been done doubae-handed — crewed by only two — over such a long distance. Dilna and Roopa will now prepare for their next big challenge. The Navy is preparing to flag off the 'Sagar Parikrama IV'expedition, a circumnavigation of the globe, on INSV Tarini, scheduled to commence in Interestingly, both have an armed forces background — Dilna's father was in the Army while Roopa's served in the Air Force. Both were also actively involved in the NCC before joining the Navy and have led Navy's Republic Day marching contingents. Dilna is a commerce graduate who joined the Logistics branch in the Navy. She has also been a national-level shooter. Roopa has been a university rank holder in aeronautical engineering who joined the Navy's Armament Inspectorate branch. She is an active marathon runner. Both have logged an impressive 38,000 nautical miles of sailing under their belt.

Ever since they volunteered for 'Sagar Parikrama IV' in 2022, both women have made INSV Tarini their home. They often stay on the ship even when it is berthed alongside its home port in Goa and they are the ones who clean its decks and sweep its floors and do all the 'ship's husbandry' tasks. The Navy's Ocean Sailing Node in Goa gives them a full range of offshore support, infrastructure and academic guidance. INS Mandovi acts as the mothership nurturing the vessel and the sailors, and the Indian Naval Sailing Association at Delhi handles the overall development of sailing in the Indian Navy.

The Navy has exhaustively trained these officers in all aspects of ocean sailing. Further, a full-fledged medical support team, which includes a psychologist and sleep medicine specialist, monitors their health and medical fitness. Above all, they have an ace in the form of the legendary Abhilash Tomy, who joined them as a mentor in August 2023.

In praise of the sailors, Tomy says, "My job was tremendously reduced thanks to the willingness and effort that the women have put in... Personally, I think they have done well, especially in comparison to the other crew who have sailed the route. They have been safe and quite professional in dealing with defects in the boat and navigating it, and have brought the boat back in an excellent state of preservation."

Quite fascinatingly, in Cowes, UK, on April 22, a sailing yacht appropriately called 'Maiden' won the McIntyre Ocean Globe Race, becoming the first all-women crew to win an around-the-world yacht race. The crew included two Indians who sailed in different legs. Lt Cdr Payal Gupta is a serving Navy officer and Dhanya Pilo is the daughter of a retired Navy officer. Their triumph needs a separate telling.

Reviewing NOTA

Need to make it a potent option for voters

THE electoral no-show in Surat, where BJP candidate Mukesh Dalal was declared the winner unopposed, has reignited the debate on the NOTA (none of the above) option for the voters. The episode underscores the need for reforms to ensure that the fundamental right of citizens to choose their representatives is not violated or denied. The introduction of NOTA in 2013 on the directions of the Supreme Court was a landmark step aimed at empowering voters and holding political parties accountable. However, the Surat fiasco highlights the limitations of NOTA in its current form. Lacking teeth, it has repeatedly failed to influence the poll result. The latest outcome has raised questions about the integrity of the electoral process and the centrality of voters in a democratic exercise. Should a candidate be declared victorious without having faced any opposition? Should NOTA necessitate a repoll if it gets more votes than any contestant?

The apex court has issued a notice to the Election Commission of India (ECI) on a plea seeking a repoll in constituencies where NOTA receives the majority of the votes. This calls for a reevaluation of NOTA's role in the electoral process. While NOTA serves as a symbolic gesture of dissent — a negative vote — its true potential lies in catalysing systemic change and deterring parties from fielding unsuitable candidates. Countries like Indonesia mandate a repoll if NOTA emerges 'victorious', thus ensuring that citizens' dissatisfaction is addressed comprehensively. The ECI must explore ways to enhance NOTA's effectiveness, including considering proposals to annul the elections in constituencies where it bags the highest number of votes. This will compel political parties to nominate candidates with an unblemished reputation. Promoting NOTA — or the right to reject — as a 'fictional' nominee can make it a potent tool of democratic expression.

A strong case for corrective advertisements

Patanjali Ayurved has finally issued an "unconditional public apology" for its disobedience of the directions and orders of the Supreme Court, through large advertisements, but is it enough

Patanjali Ayurved has finally issued an "unconditional public apology" for its disobedience of the directions and orders of the Supreme Court, through large advertisements, but is it enough?

The apex court will obviously deliberate on this issue at its next hearing, but for consumers, who have been misled for years, nothing short of a series of courtdirected 'corrective advertisements' to set right the erroneous impressions created by the company's campaigns and advertisements will do. Consumers have a right to information and informed choice and it is imperative that Patanjali informs, through corrective advertisements, that it advertised its products despite knowing fully well that it was violating the Drugs and Magic Remedies (Objectionable Advertisements) Act and the Drugs and Cosmetics Act and also admits the misrepresentations. The prominence and duration of such advertisements should correspond to the original ones. Such advertisements would not only hold the company accountable for its misdeeds, but also send out a warning to all those businesses who unabashedly peddle lies and half-truths about their products and services, at the cost of consumers' health and safety. In fact, such misrepresentations strike at the very root of the citizen's fundamental right to life and flowing from it, right to health, safe food and drugThe concept of corrective advertisements may have its share of naysayers, particularly among businesses, but I have always been a strong votary of corrective advertisements as the most effective legal remedy for false and misleading advertisements. First, it cures the erroneous impression created by such advertisements in the minds of consumers. Second, if used effectively, it can be a very strong deterrent against misrepresentations because the perpetrator is forced to invest heavily in advertisements that actually expose him and hold him accountable for misleading the public. Third, even when a false advertisement is pulled down, there is always a time lag between its appearance and its withdrawal, by which time it would have already conveyed the misinformation. It's for this reason that every law, regulation, irrespective of the sector, dealing with false and misleading advertisements should have a provision for corrective advertisement and it must be enforced extensively and effectively. I put particular emphasis on the enforcement because having successfully pushed for the corrective advertisement provision in the Consumer Protection Act as well as the Food Safety and Standards (Advertising and Claims) Regulations, I am extremely disappointed that most often, the provision is ignored. Even when applied by consumer courts, there is a lack of understanding of its objective and therefore, the corrective advertisement does not serve the intended purpose. One of the best examples of corrective advertisements can be found in the directions of a federal court in the United States in what is commonly known as the Civil Racketeering lawsuit against tobacco companies. Accordingly, in 2017, major tobacco companies had to issue corrective statements as full-page advertisements in at least 50 newspapers around the country once a week for one year and also broadcast them as 30 and 45-second prime time shots on major TV networks. The corrective statements had to refer to the manipulation of cigarette design and composition to enhance nicotine delivery, adverse health effects of smoking, addictiveness of cigarette smoking and nicotine, absence of health benefits from smoking low tar, light, ultra-light, mild and natural cigarettes, and adverse health effects of exposure to secondhand smoking.

at least 50 newspapers around the country once a Patanjali's promotion of its drugs makes a strong case for corrective advertisements because the company has constantly flouted laws with impunity and misled consumers for years. It cocked a snook at the enforcement authorities. It even tried that with the Supreme Court!The Drugs and Magic Remedies (Objectionable Advertisements) Act prohibits advertising and promotion of any drug for the diagnosis, cure, mitigation, treatment and prevention of any disease, disorder or condition specified in the Schedule of the Act. And the Schedule covers almost all diseases, including diabetes, high or low blood pressure, glaucoma, and goitre. Yet, Patanjali advertised drugs for these diseases consistently, despite notices from the Uttarakhand licensing authority, following complaints.

The law also prohibits misleading advertisements, and many of its advertisements, forwarded by the Union Ministry of Consumer Affairs to the Advertising Standards Council of India (on complaints from consumers), were found to be misleading. And such infractions have gone on for years.

In fact, Patanjali's belligerence also speaks very poorly of the enforcement agencies and calls for strict action against officials who failed to act suo motu, and also on complaints. It also calls for more transparency in the working of enforcement agencies and regular scrutiny of their work through independent agencies.

The intense heat could strain power grids and result in water shortages in parts of India.

"Ready For Fight": Rajnath Singh On Buzz Over Rahul, Priyanka Gandhi Contest

New Delhi: Defence Minister Rajnath Singh expressed confidence today that the BJP would score 80/80 in Uttar Pradesh, shrugging off any concern that low voting could be bad news for his party.

Rajnath Singh, who is the BJP candidate from Lucknow, also slammed what he called the opposition's 'politics of obfuscation' in an interview with NDTV on the campaign trail."PM (Narendra Modi)'s popularity is unparalleled. He has raised India's stature in the world. The country wants him to the Prime Minister. People trust Modi," the Defence Minister said.

The BJP will win all 80 seats in UP," he added.On the buzz about Rahul Gandhi and Priyanka Gandhi Vadra both contesting from UP - in Amethi and Raebareli - the BJP veteran remarked: "What's the delay then? Anyone can contest. We are ready for the fight."Mr Singh attributed the low voting percentage to the lack of enthusiasm among the opposition's voters."Some of the low voting is because of the heat. Besides, everyone knows the BJP will return with a bumper majority and Modi will be PM. So those who vote for the opposition are not able to muster any enthusiasm," said Mr Singh, dismissing analyses that linked the low turnout in some parts of the country with disillusionment on the ground and anti-incumbency. Mr Singh hit out at the opposition for raising allegations of probe agency targeting, especially the incarceration of leaders like Arvind Kejriwal, in their Lok Sabha campaign."If agencies are wrong, then anyone has the option of approaching courts. India's Oil Import Bill Could Reach USD 101-104 Billion In 2024-25: Report 2023-24 and any escalation in the Iran-Israel conflict could impart an upward pressure on the value of imports, ICRA said today. The domestic rating agency said based on its analysis, lower value of Russian oil imports is estimated to have led to savings of USD 7.9 billion in 11 months (April-February) of 2023-24, up from USD 5.1 billion in 2022-23."With India's oil import dependency expected to remain high, if the discounts on purchases of Russian crude persist at the prevailing low levels, ICRA expects India's net oil import bill to widen to USD 101-104 billion in FY2025 from USD 96.1 billion in FY2024, assuming an average crude oil price of USD 85/bbl in the fiscal," ICRA said.

India slams US media report linking RAW officer to Pannun plot: 'Irresponsible'

India has slammed as "unwarranted" the Washington Post report alleging that a former RAW officer hired a hit team to target Khalistani terrorist Gurpatwant Singh Pannun in the US.

New Delhi: India on Tuesday strongly rejected a report in the Washington Post alleging that a former Indian intelligence officer plotted to assassinate Khalistani terrorist Gurpatwant Singh Pannun on American soil. The report claimed that Vikram Yadav, a former officer with India's Research and Analysis Wing (RAW), hired a hit team to target Gurpatwant Singh Pannun, a designated terrorist by India who resides in the United States.Ministry of External Affairs spokesperson Randhir Jaiswal called the India has consistently denied these report "unwarranted and unsubstantiated.'

Jaiswal stated that there is an ongoing investigation by a high-level committee established by the Indian government to address security concerns raised by the US regarding criminal terrorist networks."Speculative and irresponsible comments on it are not helpful," he added. This comes after tensions flared in November 2022 when the Financial Times reported that the US had thwarted a plot to kill Pannun and issued a warninA subsequent indictment filed in a Manhattan court named Indian national Nikhil Gupta as a conspirator who allegedly collaborated with an unnamed Indian official, referred to as "CC-1," in the plot. The Washington Post identified to investigate the allegations.External Affairs Minister S Jaishankar said earlier this month that India's national security interests are involved in its investigation into the alleged involvement of a government official in the assassination plot aimed at Pannun. The Washington Post reported that the Biden administration has refrained from making charges against Vikram Yadav.

Meanwhile, the White House said that it expects the Indian government to take accountability based on the outcome of the investigation."This is a serious matter and we're taking that very, very seriously. The Government of India has been very clear with us that they are taking this seriously and will investigate," White House Press Secretary Karine Jean-Pierre said."We expect accountability from the

Are you using the right foundation for your skin?

A woman's vanity box is empty without a foundation which acts as a base for makeup. However, since there are many varieties of foundations which are available in the market, that come in different formulations - cream, mousse or dry ones — you need to know the one that matches your skin tone and suits your skin texture the best.

Spinners need variation to survive: Kumar Kartikeya amid run-fests in IPL 2024

New Delhi. MI bowler revealed the strategy for the spinners to survive the carnage being carried out by the batters in the ongoing edition of IPL 2024. He reckoned that spinners needed to have variations to get the batter of batters. This season of the cash-rich league has witnessed 29 200-plus runs being scored in 43 matches. While talking to the media ahead of MI's clash against LSG at the Ekana Stadium, Lucknow on April 30, Kartikeya reckoned that seeing the latest trends of the league, where 200-plus runs are being scored and chased at ease, the spinners need to bring variations in their bowling. He pointed out that the pitches have not been offering any help to the bowlers and hence, the onus comes on them to put their skills to the test.

"I have been seeing that in this season of IPL, 200-plus runs are being scored and also being chased down easily. For spinners, if you have a variation, you have an extra weapon in your arsenal. I feel that variation should be there. As there is no help for the spinners on the wicket, not even bowlers, then it becomes important to add more variation for the spinners. That is the only way to survive.' Kartileya said in the pre-match press conference. The likes of Kuldeep Yadav and Yuzvendra Chahal have found some success in the tournament because of the variation they brought while bowling. These 2 have been the only spinners in the race for the Purple Cap, with the list being dominated by the pacers.Kartikeya also suggested that it is important to keep things simple to reap benefits against the batters. He also gave the example of KKR bowler Sunil Narine and his bowling against DC."I saw the match and the areas in which Sunil Narine bowled, no matter how good the wicket is, no matter how much help there is for the batters or the bowlers, if you won't bowl in the good areas. He kept it simple and reaped benefits. Hence, we also try to do the same. The simpler you keep, the more benefits you will get. If we complicate it more that a lot of runs are being scored, then we are creating problems for ourselves. If we keep it simple, it is easier," Kartikeya added.

T20 World Cup squad: Should Indian selectors get swayed by IPL form

New Delhi. There is a super selector in each one of us as cricket fans and every IPL whenever we see young players dazzle, that guy wakes up as we try to convince ourselves and others that those performers should be picked for India. As this year's IPL precedes a marquee global competition like the T20 World Cup, there is a familiar clamour building up to pick may be an Ashutosh Sharma or a Shashank Singh as finishers, as they have engineered a couple of stunning heists for Punjab Kings.

In the IPL, some of the Indian batters do not face four or five quality international bowlers for their full quota. Also, the wickets in the Caribbean and America, may not be as flat as they are in the IPL and may require batting skills and not just hitting skills as we are currently witnessing in the IPL.India's matches are all going to be day games to suit the broadcast timings for an Indian audience which means dew won't be a factor and the wickets may offer some grip for the spinners and clearing one's front leg and depositing the ball into the stands may not be so easy. May be, we will see lower scores and there may be place for someone who plays the role of a traditional sheet anchor.Also, players shining for their franchises in certain positions may not get to bat at that position for the national team as India already have proven performers in those roles. Abhishek Sharma (SRH) and Ruturaj Gaikwad (CSK), who have done well as openers, are competing against Rohit Sharma and Yashasvi Jaiswal. At No.3 and No.4, India have players who answer to the name of Virat Kohli and Suryakumar Yadav.

In two back-to-back T20 World Cups, the selectors paid a heavy price of going for a couple of IPL performers. In 2021, when the event was held in the UAE, they opted for Varun Chakravarthy, who had a great season conditions for India when he played in the World Cup. for KKR, but was ineffective in the same

Hardik Pandya explains 'art of finishing' matches with foodie analogy

New Delhi Hardik Pandya hasn't had a memorable time since his return to the cricket field after recovering from an ankle injury he suffered during the ODI World Cup last year. Neither his bowling nor his batting has clicked amid furore over his appointment as the Mumbai Indians' captain, replacing Rohit Sharma.

IPL 2024: Results | Points Table

While the MI captaincy debate has largely settled despite the five-time IPL champions' indifferent show so far this season, Hardik now waits to know his fate as far as India's T20 World Cup squad is announced as he leads MI in their next IPL match against Lucknow Super Giants on Tuesday. Ahead of the game, in the 'Captains Speak' segment on Star Sports, the allrounder made an interesting comment on the "art of finishing" matches, using an analogy related to food.

"If you go to a fancy restaurant and they present you something, the taste might be amazing; but if they don't add the finishing touch (to presentation), it does not add to the charm to the dish, no matter how good it is.

ven after more than 21 years in Bollywood, Katrina Kaif feels she still has a long way to go and more to achieve. Currently, she's busy trying to work with her favorite directors. Recently, she got to work with Sriram Raghavan for the first time on their film Merry Christmas, which was released earlier this year. The film, also featuring Tamil actor Vijay Sethupathy, was based on Frédéric Dard's French novel Le Montecharge (Bird in a Cage). Speaking to Variety, Katrina expressed her love for the book, praising its tender, poetic, and mysterious qualities, reminiscent of Hitchcock, and its mix of drama, mystery, and murder presented in a unique way. Praising Raghavan, she said that his characters on screen have a realness and depth to them. "There's a certain rawness and realness to the characters in his films when you watch them on screen. They're very flawed, they're very imperfect, but there's like a tangible, humane quality about them. They feel very real, like I've seen this person or I know this person. He has a certain grip on having something relatable to what he depicts on screen, even though sometimes the situations are so outlandish, but yet the characters are so you can feel you can understand what they're going through, and you relate to their emotions," she said. However, Merry Christmas isn't the only movie she's proud of. Katrina Kaif also mentioned a few titles that played a big role in her career. These include Namastey London (2007), Welcome (2007), Singh Is King (2008), New York (2009), Ajab Prem Ki Ghazab Kahani (2009), Rajneeti (2010), and Zindagi Na Milegi Dobara (2011). She also said she doesn't just see them as movies but like top moments in her life. "I wouldn't call them films, I would call them moments in my life. They were surrounded by an entire emotion, an entire feeling. It wasn't just playing a character and going home, it seeped into my life at that time, the film would become my entire life. That film, that crew, that moment, that environment would become my whole life. I'd be consumed and then the film would release and there would be a moment of emptiness and loss. And then you would go on to the next one. These are all incredible moments for me as an actor, as a performer,"
